U.S. PLEA FOR FINNS

By ERIC FRIEDHEIM
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12—The American government appealed to Soviet Russia today to refrain from any action which might disturb peaceful relations between Moscow and Finland—A step obviously designed to save the independence of the Finns.

While this government has ignored inspired Berlin reports that President Roosevelt act as mediator to bring peace in Europe's war the Executive approved representations by the state department to prevent the conflict from spreading to the Baltic.

This government's appeal to the Stalin government was transmitted by the American ambassador to Russia, Laurence Steinhardt, and came while a Finnish mission in Moscow strove to reach an agreement to forestall war between the Soviets and Finland.

Dispatches from abroad said Ambassador Steinhardt had an hour's conference with Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov.

WINS SOLONS' O.K.

There was no official announcement of the American action in the increasingly critical situation between Russa and Finland, but authoritative sources revealed that this government, acting alone, was making an "earnest appeal" for the maintenance of peace.

The State Department's representations to Moscow won immediate aproval among members of Congress who hoped that the appeal may be the nucleus of a spreading peace movement.

Several members expressed "hearty approval" of the "humane attempt" for peace by this government.

Speaker Bankhead of the House said:

"If we can obtain peace by proper representation without involvement, I am for it. I am content to rest those matters in the hands of Secretary of State Cordell Hull."

Sen. Pittman (D.) of Nevada, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee and spokesman for the Administration on foreign affairs, said the govern-

Behind the Front—The United States took a diplomatic hand today in the snarled situation in Europe by making a direct appeal to Russia to stay its hand in Finland. United States Ambassador to Russia Laurence Steinhardt bore to the Soviet officials a State Department request that Russia refrain from taking any step that might disturb the peaceful relations between Russia and Finland. Meanwhile, Prime Minister Chamberlain's awaited speech in Parliament rejected Hitler's proposals for peace based on the conquest of Poland. Chamberlain, however, left the door to peace open a crack when he said, in effect, that Germany could have peace if it made proper reparations with sufficient guarantees for future good conduct. What fate lay in store for Finland remained a question as representatives of the two nations met in Moscow. Observers who felt that the Scandinavian country would follow in the footsteps of the other Baltic states and subject herself to a Russian protectorate and thereby give the Reds complete domination of the sea waited to see what effect, if any, the American move would have on Stalin's plans.

In the Air, on the Sea—Britain announced today the seizure of the 13,615-ton German luxury liner Cap Norte, in the South Atlantic. It was hinted the Cap Norte might be the sea raider that sunk a British merchant ship off Brazil early this month. A Netherlands citizen, one of the cooks aboard the Nazi-owned Bremen, told a vivid story of the $20,000,000 liner's dramatic voyage to safety in the Russian port of Murmansk. The 577 American refugees aboard the liner Iroquois were safe in New York today after a harrowing trip across the Atlantic which was made more terrifying by a three-day hurricane at sea. A Norwegian fishing captain told of a British-Nazi battle in the North Sea on Monday in which 150 Nazi planes and five British warships took part.

On the Front—Germany pushed its preparations for the anticipated big push on the western front which is reported to be launched within a few days. Nazi engineers were reported throwing pontoon bridges across the Rhine, near Marnz, and across the Saar, just south of Luxembourg, believed to be the points where the thrust will begin.

BIG GERMAN LINER SEIZED BY BRITISH

LONDON, Oct. 12 (AP)—The British navy was reported to have captured the 13,615-ton German steamer Cap Norte.

The report, issued by the British Press Association, said the Cap Norte, a ship in trade between Germany and South America, had sailed from the Brazilian port of Pernambuco Sept. 17.

Capture of the Cap Norte had been hinted in yesterday's remarks by Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, in the House of Commons.

Churchill related that during the period from Sept. 24 to Oct. 9, Great Britain had a favorable balance of 7806 tons of shipping in comparing her seizures with her losses from German submarine attacks.

He explained that Britain had lost 6809 tons to German submarines and had taken 13,615 tons—the exact figure of the Cap Norte's gross tonnage.

Beyond saying the capture occurred in the south Atlantic, the press association's naval correspondent gave no details.

The Cap Norte was built at Hamburg in 1922 and was believed

BRITAIN REJECTS ANY HITLER PEACE

By CHARLES A. SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Oct. 12—The peace proposed by Adolf Hitler, "based upon recognition of his conquests and the right to do what he pleases with what he has conquered," was rejected by Prime Minister Chamberlain today.

But he gave the German government a further opportunity to display by "acts, not words" a sincerity and a willingness to redress the wrongs done to Czechoslovakia and Poland.

Otherwise, the Prime Minister told the House of Commons, Britain, France and the Dominions turn down the "uneasy truce" he has offered and will continue to wage war "to the utmost of our strength."

The war cannot come to an end, and peace cannot be restored, Chamberlain declared, until Germany has a government whose word can be trusted and whose pledges will be kept.

Britain and France are fighting, he said, not alone for the independence of liberty of Poland, but for the precious heritage of Britain, France, the far-flung dominions and colonies of the British Empire and for "freedom-loving nations" throughout the length and breadth of the world.

ONLY WITHOUT CONQUEST

Slowly, dispassionately and without melodrama, Chamberlain condemned Hitlerism, but insisted that the allies were fighting without vindictiveness and proclaimed Britain's readiness to hear the claims and make a rightful place in Europe for "a Germany which will live in amity and confidence with other nations."

In the meantime, he said, it would be incompatible with Britain's honor to accept the peace which has been offered—a peace based upon recognition of conquest.

"It would be impossible for Britain to accept any such basis without forfeiting her honor and abandoning her claim that international disputes should be settled by discussion, not by force," he said.

This statement aroused a burst of cheering in the House and had

BALTIC CONTROL IN BALANCE

WHILE "conversations" between Finland's foreign envoy and Soviet statesmen went on today in Moscow, Finland massed troops on Russian border and sent her fleet to Aland Islands, goal of Soviet Baltic control aims, to guard them. Meanwhile, Sweden held troops in readiness for overt move by Soviets. Baltic's future hinges on Russia's next move.

Inside Bremen Story Of Escape to Russia

Copyright, 1939, by Associated Press

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 12—A Netherlands seaman on the German liner Bremen declared today the vessel reached Murmansk, north Russian port, after a thrilling voyage, during which she flew the Soviet flag and preparations were made to destroy her rather than allow her to fall into British hands.

E. Post, a cook and only Netherlands seaman on the Bremen when she sailed Aug. 30 from New York, told his story in a copyrighted interview with the Amsterdam newspaper Het Volk after his return to his native country.

He said Captain Adolf Ahrens skirted the blockade of the British fleet with barrels of gasoline on deck ready for burning the vessel rather than allow her to be captured by the British.

LIKE HUGE GRAY GHOST

The voyage was veiled in such secrecy, he said, that the crew did not know the liner's destination, all lights were extinguished during the North Atlantic crossing, and the wireless answered no calls.

Post said that after some days at sea he realized the Bremen was sailing far to the north, because of the cold weather, but that he had no idea where she was going.

There were no passengers or cargo and every precaution was made to save the crew in event of an attack.

The vessel was painted gray as she sped across the Atlantic. She travelled much of the time in heavy mist, which helped to conceal her from any ships near her course.

Post said the Bremen flew the Soviet flag and the flag of the North German-Lloyd line, but carried no German colors.

He said Capt. Ahrens called the crew together Sept. 3, the day Great Britain and France declared war, and told them the war had started.

HAD RATHER SINK

"It doesn't look very good for us," he quoted the captain as saying, "for I've sworn that the English won't seize me and my ship while I'm alive. I would rather sink the Bremen."

Post brought back pictures of crew activity on the voyage, showing among other things how they painted the hull of the liner while suspended in lifeboats.

One picture showed a group in which Post was conspicuous as the only one not giving the Nazi salute.

"Sir, sir, what a journey we have had!" the Hollander said in summing up the trip.

"I can tell you I have sailed many seas in my life and have seen many ports, but I have experienced nothing like this.

"A load fell from my chest when we on the Bremen saw the coast of Murmansk appear out of the mist.

OUTWITS BRITISH NAVY

"The old man (Capt. Ahrens) brought us through and no matter what you might say about a Nazi captain, he, together with all these clever boys, outwitted the British navy."

He told of delays in New York and how the vessel sailed Aug. 30 with only a few officers knowing where she was going.

(The Bremen, 51,731 tons and $20,000,000 flagship of the German merchant fleet, was delayed in New York while United

Same Bus, Same Spot, New Fire

Angus McGillivary, Boston Elevated bus driver, wants it distinctly understood he is not superstitious.

But, just the same, he wishes his route from Central sq., Cambridge, to Brighton could be changed a little, so he wouldn't have to stop at his bad luck corner—Western ave. and Howard st., Cambridge.

At that very spot today, for the second morning in succession, his bus caught fire, his passengers had to flee, and he had to call the fire department.

Same stop, same fire alarm box, same sad story to tell the boss, in both instances.

Yesterday, Angus was driving from Brighton to Central sq. when the jinx hit him. And 29 passengers had to leave their seats.

Today he was going in the opposit direction and carrying only seven passengers.

Both times the fire was under the engine hood of the bus. Both times it was extinguished with minor damage—except to the feelings of Driver McGillivary!

Hit-Run Boat Swamps Pair

Swamped by a "hit and run" speed boat, Ralph Adams, 30, of 160 Neck rd., and Arthur Williams, of 59 Stratford rd., both North Weymouth, spent an uncomfortable half hour in Weymouth Bay today.

They were out in a small boat, with an outboard motor attached, when a power boat dashed by, the wash swamping them. The power boat sped on, leaving them floundering in the water.

Charles A. Halman and Edward T. Hunt, Jr., of the North Weymouth Yacht Club, spotted them and put out in a boat of their own, hauling them aboard, and towing in their disabled craft. They suffered no ill effects from the ducking.

Names G. J. Meade To Air Advisory Board

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 (AP)—President Roosevelt appointed George Jackson Mead of West Hartford, Conn., today to be a member of the national advisory committee for aeronautics for the remainder of the five-year term of Dr. Joseph S. Ames of Baltimore.

Dr. Ames, whose service began in 1915, was reappointed for another five years December 1, 1938. He resigned because of ill health.

75 HUB FIREMEN FACE SUSPENSION

Approximately 75 Boston firemen, the Boston Evening American learned today, face suspension Monday because they are non-residents of the city.

These men were in a group of about 200 firemen who received warning last spring from Fire Commissioner William Arthur Reilly that drastic action would be taken against them unless they established residence in Boston.

Whether or not they thought the matter had been dropped since, the 75 firemen to be affected failed to comply with the order.

The American learned that under present plans those firemen who have not moved to within the city limits, or who cannot show that they have made arrangements to move in, will be suspended on Monday.

Then they will have a brief period in which to comply with Commissioner O'Reilly's order, and if they do so they will be reinstated. Those who do not do so will be dropped from the department.

This probably would mean that their places would be filled by appointment from the firemen's list, the fire department already being approximately 100 men short of full ranks anyway.

In his order of last spring, Commissioner Reilly said that all Boston firemen are required to live within the city but that many were living outside and that some had even bought homes outside.

Car Thieves Even Steal Dog Passenger's Bone

Skippy, the pet dog of John Snow of Allston, was Greater Boston's most disgusted pup today.

In the first place, he had been "taken for a ride" by two auto thieves who stole his master's car—and him along with it!

The thieves wrested away a luscious bone—and they had used the bone to smash a jewelry store window in Brattle sq., Cambridge.

Finally they wrecked the auto in an excavation at Inman sq., Cambridge, and left Skippy, still shut in the machine. They didn't even leave the bone for Skippy to chew on until police came along.

Passengers Relate 'Horror' of Trip on 'Doomed' Iroquois

NEW YORK, Oct. 12 (AP)—A terrific three-day storm and an ever-flowing stream of sinister rumors tortured 788 Americans—577 passengers and 211 crewmen—who reached New York last night on the liner Iroquois—the ship which the German admiralty warned would be sunk, supposedly by an allied belligerent.

Ablaze with lights, the 12-year-old vessel dropped anchor to the cheers of some 2000 who had gathered to greet her. A giant spotlight played on a large American flag at her stern. Other powerful lights were directed on two other flags—12 by 20 feet—painted on her sides.

Mrs. Mary Stiegelman of Baltimore, one of the passengers, declared:

"If ever there was a ship of horrors, this was it. The storm was so bad that some of the officers said they expected the top of the boat to blow off. Everyone was ill. Then, they started searching our baggage and wouldn't say what for.

WENT INTO HOLDS

"They made us go into the holds—dark, dirty holds—to identify our trunks. Some of us were so sick we couldn't go, and they told us they would smash our trunks open."

Several passengers agreed the most frightening of the speculations aboard ship was that a time bomb had been secreted somewhere.

Even two United States destroyers which met the 394-foot ship Monday to form a convoy on orders of the White House caused alarm at first, some passengers rushing to the conclusion that they were hostile vessels.

The master of the Iroquois, Capt. E. A. Chelton, said he was advised by Washington last Thursday of an extraordinary message from Berlin which warned that the ship would be sunk near the American coast under circumstances similar to those surrounding the destruction of the British liner Athenia. The Germans have contended the British, not they, were responsible for that disaster.

The warning seemed incredible, the captain said, "but I was told I had to believe it until it was proved otherwise."

That meant six days of awful suspense.

"The first thing I did," he said, "was to call the heads of the (ship) departments together and tell them about it, instructing them at the same time not to speak to the passengers about it.

"Then I had the ship searched for radios—(In case someone aboard might be signaling marauding craft). We took off radio antennae and removed tubes from several short-wave sets the crew had. The passengers did not have radios.

"Of course the crew knew, and the passengers too, that there was something up, but they didn't know what.

"On Sunday morning when the cutter came up, I told the passengers part of what had happened. I said I had information there would be other ships sunk as was the Athenia, but I didn't mention the Iroquois. The next day two U. S. destroyers came up, and then I gathered the passengers in the lounge and announced specifically what my information was. They all cheered.

"I had the ship searched every day until we got here," the captain said, "but found absolutely nothing."

DARK RUMORS

Neil Fitzgerald, an actor from Hollywood, told of one of the many rumors which kept the passengers jittery.

"We heard," he said, "that a mysterious man tried to get on board at Liverpool, but failed. He was then supposed to have taken the overnight boat to Dublin and then on to Cobh.

"At Cobh, however, all trace of him was lost, and the supposition was that he got aboard the Iroquois. He was supposed to have carried a brown package containing a bomb. When this rumor got around, the officers searched the baggage and staterooms."

Scores of passengers suffered black eyes and bruises last Thursday, Friday and Saturday, when the little ship "rolled like a tin can" in a heavy gale. Tables were overturned. Sleepers were hurled from their bunks. Much of the bar's glassware was broken. Seasickness abounded.

Nazi's Now Claim 'Proof' They Are U. S. Friends

BERLIN, Oct. 12 (AP—Authoritative German quarters said today they considered the fact that the refugee ship Iroquois reached New York safely was "proof that the German navy's fraternal attitude toward America had yielded a 100 per cent success.

Grand Marshal Erich Raeder, commander-in-chief of the German navy, had warned the United States government that the Iroquois would be torpedoed.

Seek to Lift Arms Ban on U. S. Ships

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 (AP)—Leaders on both sides of the arms embargo controversy sought today to modify the neutrality bill's rigid ban on American ships trading with belligerents.

Half a dozen senators arranged to confer with Chairman Pittman (D.), Nevada, of the foreign relations committee on as many proposed changes. Details were not disclosed.

Meanwhile, four more speakers asked for time to carry on the Senate neutrality debate—Senators La-Follette (Prog.) Wisconsin, and Bulow (D.), S. D., for retention of the arms embargo, and Chavez (D.), N. M., and Taft (R.), Ohio, for its repeal.

Senator Bailey (D.), N. C., an advocate of embargo repeal and one of those favoring modification of the shipping restrictions, said he was satisfied that changes would be made "tending to preserve the interests of our merchant marine, which is a great arm of our national defense."

"NOTHING INCONSISTENT"

"It is certain," he said, "nothing will be done inconsistent with preserving the peace of this country. This is going to be a war of strangulation, according to all evidences, and this strangulation relates directly to commerce on the seas.

"Germany will wish to cut off British and French supplies, and Britain and France will wish to cut off German supplies. We are trying to adjust our sea-borne commerce to that situation."

The neutrality bill would require belligerents to pay cash (or limit credits to 90 days) for American purchases, which they would have to transport in foreign ships.

Thus American vessels would be banned not only from the nations at war in Europe, but from British and French possessions around the world.

PACIFIC TRADE IN MIND

While most of the talk about modification has centered around lifting the ban on American shipping in the Pacific—particularly with Australia and New Zealand—some senators believe that it would be safe to allow trading with belligerent colonies in the south Atlantic and across to South America.

Should any of these areas later become "dangerous" for American shipping, it was pointed out that the President, under the provision authorizing him to designate combat zones, could apply the ban to them.

Senators Johnson (R.) of California and Borah (R.) of Idaho, principal opponents of embargo repeal, also were working on the compromise shipping clause.

Borah expressed the belief that all Pacific shipping could be permitted.

BULLETINS

LONDON, Oct. 12 (INS)—Sabotage was attributed to the outlawed Irish Republican Army today when fires were discovered in five mail boxes near Hyde Park and Victoria Station.

LONDON, Oct. 12 (INS)—A report circulated in Berlin that Polish troops used poison gas supplied by Great Britain was officially denied here today. No gas in any form whatever was supplied at any time by Britain to Poland, the announcement said.

BERLIN, Oct. 12 (AP)—DNB, official German news agency, reported from Kaunas today that the Lithuanian Sejm (parliament) had been called for Saturday to discuss ratification of the Soviet Russian-Lithuanian mutual assistance treaty.

OTTAWA, Oct. 12 (Canadian Press)—Government officials said today the British Empire-wide program designed to make Canada the air training center of the empire would be geared to produce from 6000 to 20,000 military pilots a year. Pilots from Canada, Britain, Australia and New Zealand will be trained in Canada.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 12 (AP)—Rumania sent tens of thousands of her reserve soldiers home today to do the fall plowing and announced that all reservists would be granted similar leaves before winter.

RIGA, Oct. 12 (AP)—The Latvian government announced today it would speed up the emigration of Latvians of German blood despite a German legation request that they be given until next March 31 to choose citizenship. Dispatches from Tallinn, Estonia, reported sailing of the first ship bearing German repatriates.

Britain Moves To Fix Prices

LONDON, Oct. 12 (AP)—A measure designed to stamp out war profiteering in food and everyday commodities by price regulation was introduced today in the House of Commons by the government.

The board of trade would be empowered to set maximum prices computed generally on prices paid Aug. 1, plus normal increases due to the war.

A central price regulation committee would enforce the legislation which proposed fines up to £100 (about $405) and jail terms of three months for violators.

fined £500 (about $2025) or prevent could be sent to jail for two years, fined £500 about $2,025) or prevented from carrying on business.

The legislation would not apply to exports.

Morrison Quits A. F. of L. Office

CINCINNATI, Oct. 12 (INS)—Eyes brimming with tears and his voice shaking, Frank Morrison, grand old man of the labor movement, resigned today as secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Labor several hours in advance of the election of officers.

Morrison had held office since 1896, serving under Sam Gompers, often termed the father of the labor movement, and more recently under President William Green.

Morrison was expected to be succeeded in office by George Meany, president of the New York State Federation of Labor and member of the United Association of Plumbers and steamfitters.

Lobby talk had prepared the convention for the event and the usual hum of conversation in the convention hall died as Morrison rose "to make an announcement."

After a few preliminary remarks the white-haired secretary said:

"I have decided I will not be a candidate for the office of secretary-treasurer for the ensuing year.

HUB IN COLORFUL TRIBUTE TO COLUMBUS

East Boston Parade Holiday's High Spot

With pageantry, music and holiday festivity, Boston today paid tribute to Christopher Columbus, who first set foot on this New World 128 years before Pilgrims landed on Plymouth Rock.

The commemorative program began at 9 a. m. and was scheduled to last until late tonight, with East Boston the scene of a parade by 10,000 marchers.

More than 60,000 spectators were expected to watch the procession, police said as special traffic details were assigned.

East Boston was cloaked in flags and bunting its entire length for a mighty celebration which this year, for the first time, was shifted from the Italian district in historic North End.

The program got under way at 9 a. m. with special events for children at World War Memorial Park, East Boston, and a 10-mile road race through the streets of that district.

Exercises at Parkman Bandstand on Common were to begin at 11:30, and representatives from all the Pan-American countries are expected to participate. There will be a salute to the flag of each country, as the band plays the national airs, and Mayor Tobin will extend the greetings of the city. Charles S. O'Connor, clerk of the State Supreme Court will be orator of the day.

10,000 IN PARADE

Headed by John Luongo, past commander of the Lieut. Flaherty Post, A. L., as chief marshal, the parade is scheduled to start promptly at 2 o'clock from Maverick sq., East Boston. Made up of military and veterans' units, civic and fraternal organizations, it is expected to have 10,000 in line and to take three hours to pass a given point.

The marchers will be reviewed by Lieut.-Gov. Cahill, Mayor Tobin and other distinguished guests at Central sq., and by Chief Marshal Luongo and his staff at Meridian st.

East Boston's celebration was in the hands of a general committee the officers of which were Atty. Mario F. DiTroia, chairman; William H. Barker, vice-chairman; Rev. Sixtus Brambilla, treasurer; Thomas Berry, assistant treasurer and Violet DeDeo, secretary.

MUSIC AND FIREWORKS

In the evening the program was scheduled to conclude with an elaborate display of fireworks, preceded by a band concert and exhibition drill by the fire department at World War Memorial Park. There was also to be a band concert and fireworks display at 8:30 at North End Park.

In a colorful "night before" celebration at East Boston High School, Mayor Tobin and U. S. Sen. David I. Walsh were speakers.

Sen. Walsh renewed his stand against repeal of the arms embargo and Mayor Tobin admitted his mistake in closing the East Boston Relief Hospital—promising it soon would be reopened.

Mayor Tobin said:

"I stand here before this representative gathering of citizens of East Boston and publicly declare that the outright closing of the East Boston Relief Station was a mistake, a mistake that I am going to rectify. Ladies and gentlemen, I am not the only one who has changed his mind. Your medical society from this section is now of the belief that the station should be reopened and the City Hospital trustees have come to the same conclusion.

"It took a lot of courage to close your relief station . . . It takes just as much courage, perhaps a good deal more, to get up here and admit that a mistake was made—but, thank God, I still have enough common decency, still have enough respect for truth and honor, to admit that I am wrong—when I am wrong."

POLICEMAN TAKES BRIDE—Bridal smiles adorn Mr. and Mrs. Robert N. Connor following their wedding today at St. Gregory's Church, Dorchester. The bride, daughter of Mrs. John Murray of Dorchester, was given in marriage by her brother, John M. Cadigan of Nahant. Mr. Connor is a member of the Medford police department.

Robert Connor Takes Bride

Miss Margaret Edith Murray, daughter of Mrs. John Murray of 16 Alicia road, Dorchester, today became the bride of Robert Newton Connor, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Connor, and a member of the Medford police department. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Daniel H. Sullivan, S. J., in St. Gregory's Church, Dorchester.

The bride, attired in an ivory antique satin gown with ivory lace veil and carrying an old fashioned bouquet, was given in marriage by her brother, John M. Cadigan of Nahant.

Miss Eleanor R. Murray, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and Joan Therese Buckley, the bride's niece, was junior bridesmaid.

The bridegroom was attended by James J. Mooney of Roxbury.

A reception was held at the Fox and Hounds Club, Beacon st., Back Bay. Following a motor trip Mr. and Mrs. Connor will be at home, Nov. 1, at 22 McDonald road, Medford.

Seek to Extradite Pair in Shooting

Governor Saltonstall has been asked by Dist. Atty. Robert F. Bradford of Middlesex County to request extradition from New York state of Stephen Dedecko, 25, of Hudson, and William J. Paul, 25, of Lowell, charged with assault with intent to murder Patrolman Joseph F. Hill of Waltham and John J. Donnelly, a Waltham citizen, during a gun fight Aug. 3.

The pair are serving sentences of eight months in Westchester County for carrying pistols.

43,588 Increase In Work Relief Lists

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 (AP)—The Work Projects Administration reported today there were 1,833,202 persons on work relief rolls as of Oct. 4, an increase of 43,588 over the previous week.

The new total was an increase of 173,202 from the 1939 low of 1,660,000 reached last month.

Bell Black Cats 24 Hours on Friday, 13th

FRENCH LICK, Ind., Oct. 12 (AP)—The French Lick town board thinks there's enough bad luck in the world right now without black cats adding their share on Friday, the 13th.

The board decreed today that for 24 hours beginning at midnight tonight all black cats in this bailiwick shall wear bells so residents may avoid having their paths crossed by these omens of ill luck.

Town Marshal Andy Cope was given the task of rounding up and belling the cats.

Extradition Move For Gallagly Begun

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 12 (AP)—Ellis Arnall, attorney-general of Georgia, said today agents of that state would file a fugitive complaint against Richard E. Gallogly, escaped life termer from Georgia, in Dalas and immediately seek an extradition hearing before Governor W. Lee O'Daniel.

JIM QUITS HIGH RANK AS MARINE

By GEORGE DURNO
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 (INS)—James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, has resigned his commission as lieutenant-colonel in the Marine Corps Reserve and requested reappointment as a captain.

The young movie executive—he will be 32 December 28—explained his age and military experience did not justify such a high rank as lieutenant-colonel in event of an acutal call to active service, or in peacetime for that matter.

However, he requested most earnestly that he be kept on the Marine Reserve rolls in a lower grade.

In Washington to celebrate his mother's 55th birthday anniversary, Roosevelt received an acceptance of his resignation in the higher rank, together with notification that his captain's commission would be forthcoming.

President Roosevelt appointed his son a reserve marine lieutenant-colonel to meet a problem in diplomatic protocol late in 1936 when they were en route to Buenos Aires for the Pan-American peace conference.

Tobin Attends Irwin Wedding

With Mayor Tobin and other city and state officials attending, City Councilor Francis A. Irwin of East Boston was married today in the Star of the Sea Church to Miss Cecelia W. Donahue of Moore st., East Boston, former telephone company worker.

The ceremony was performed at 9 o'clock by the Rev. Patrick J. McCarthy.

Attending the bride was her sister, Miss Mary Donahue of East Boston, and the best man was Gerald V. McCarthy of the same district. Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the General Edwards Inn, Point of Pines, Revere.

Councilor Irwin is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Irwin of East Boston, while his bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Donahue of Moore st.

HIT BY AUTO—Recovering from injuries in their Dorchester home are Mrs. Tillie Platt, 65, and her grandson, Saul Marsh, three. Mrs. Platt was pushing Saul in a baby carriage on Blue Hill ave. when an auto backed into them.

GIRL'S $375 THEFT SPURS CAFE QUIZ

Investigation of circumstances under which an 18-year-old girl was served two drinks of scotch whisky in the Silver Dollar bar was asked of the police today by City License Commissioner Edward M. Richardson.

Testifying at her trial on charges of theft of $375 from the pockets of a New Hampshire tourist on his way to the World's Fair, Mrs. Kathryn Petropoulus, now of Fall River, told the court she was served the drinks in the Washington street cafe.

Commissioner Richardson forwarded a memorandum today to Police Commissioner Timilty asking for the inquiry as a result of the testimony, it being illegal to serve liquor to a person under 21 years of age.

The girl was found guilty by Judge Wilfred D. Gray, who remanded her into the custody of the sheriff until tomorrow so that "she may commune with herself" and to see "what can be done about getting back some of the money."

The girl said she met Ernest Perry of Lee, N. H., in a restaurant where she worked; that he took her out after both had drinks and put his coat about her when she complained of the cold.

Car Kills Child, 2 Others Hurt

Death of a Dorchester girl and injuries to a Mattapan woman and her grandchild was the toll today of pre-holiday traffic in Greater Boston.

Janet Hennessey, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Hennessey of Dorchester ave., Ashmont, was killed by an automobile as she was crossing the avenue near her home.

Mrs. Tillie Platt, 65, of Norfolk street, Dorchester, suffered cuts about the face and nose when a car struck her as she was pushing a baby carriage across Blue Hill avenue, Mattapan. Her grandson, three-year-old Saul Marsh of the same address, was hurled out of the carriage and suffered cuts about the face and knees.

R. I. Man Slain By Policeman

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 12—Milton Dudley, 24, was shot to death early today in a battle with Patrolman Ambrose M. F. Farrell.

The officer, who suffered a fractured skull when struck on the head with his own nightstick by Dudley, was absolved of any criminal liability.

Police Chief John J. Parker said Farrell attempted to arrest Dudley, one of the four men engaged in a fight at 3 a. m., and that Dudley took the officer's night stick and hit him. Farrell fired when Dudley, he alleged, attempted to strike him again.

SCHOOL STRIKERS WARNED

The Salem school board decreed today that striking students at Salem High School must be at their desks Monday morning or face action for truancy. There are no classes the remainder of the week.

At the same time, the board ordered punishment for 150 pupils who renewed the strike yesterday after officials had announced "a settlement" of the walkout.

"Amnesty" had been promised in that "settlement" to more than 300 who walked out Tuesday but Superintendent George A. Bemis was given discretionary power to mete out punishment to both groups.

Bemis told the school board that there was no real reason for the strike and that charges of severe discipline by Acting Principal James J. Murray were not bourne out. In Tuesday's demonstration rebellious students, had burned an effigy of Murray in front of City Hall.

He declared that leaders of the Tuesday night demonstration will be suspended for their activity regardless of other settlement of differences of the students.

As they conferred Salem police and Truant Officer Charles Walsh collared nearly a score of students of Beverly, Lynn and Peabody high schools and other "outsiders" who were circulating among the "strikers" urging them to new demonstrations. The outsiders were told to get out of town.

School authorities announced that four grammar school boys had joined the "strike movement" by refusing to obey orders of a teacher and starting a card game in the class room. Swift disciplinary action broke up the incipient rebellion.

Governor Lauds Coolidge's Deeds

NORTHAMPTON, Oct. 12 (AP)—Governor Saltonstall, speaking today at the dedication of the Calvin Coolidge Memorial Bridge across the Connecticut river, said the principles uttered by the late President "in such simple, homely language will stand and ever remain for us as a personal guide in our difficulties."

"What better symbol of the strength and good will which President Coolidge preached than this splendid bridge?" the Governor asked.

"Such a bridge stands in our minds as one of the instruments for bringing the nations of the earth closer together in commerce, in social contacts, and in happy living. It represents, too, the bridging of the past with the future, progress rather than decay.

"There is another function which this span performs which I believe Mr. Coolidge would have happily recognized. This bridge is a very essential factor in making it possible for the Amherst boys to visit the girls at Smith."

Malden Pastor Found Dead

The Rev. Eugene Carol Webster, 75, for many years pastor of Boston's famous old Church of All Strangers, was found dead in bed today at his home in Main st., Malden. He was a victim of a heart attack, according to his family physician.

The Church of All Strangers, in Boston's South End, was largely attended, in its time, by theatrical people and other transients, including many noted personages of a past generation.

Dr. Webster had appeared in good health recently and had planned to preach Sunday at the 50th anniversary of another of his former churches, the First Congregational church of East Providence.

A. F. L. Says Reds Aided Guild's Strike

Special to the Boston Evening American

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 12—The American Federation of Labor condemned the CIO Newpaper Guild in Chicago and denounced its "strike" against the Herald-American in a resolution adopted unanimously at its convention here today.

The resolution charged Communist co-operation with the Guild to wreck jobs and throw men out of work.

The resolution, which was offered by the Illinois State Federation of Labor, empowered the executive council to take whatever steps necessary to aid 2000 members of A. F. of L. unions employed on the Chicago Herald-American whose jobs have been placed in jeopardy by activities of the Guild in Chicago.

The convention adopted the resolution which also charges all state Federation of Labor and Central Labor unions "to counteract the false and erroneous information being supplied the members of our organization, the public and national advertisers."

RAPS CIO GUILDS

The resolution marked the second attack on the Guild during the day. An earlier resolution condemned the general activities of the CIO American Newspaper Guild.

Text of the resolution sponsored by the Illinois State Federation of Labor follows:

"Whereas, the CIO Newspaper Guild of Chicago has, through a ten months' campaign of violence, misrepresentations, false appeals to our membership throughout the country, and intimidation of advertising merchants both in Chicago and on a national scale, placed the jobs of some 2000 members of our affiliated unions in jeopardy, and

"Whereas, the Chicago CIO Newspaper Guild continues to send appeals to our local unions and Central Labor Unions for funds to carry on their fight against the newspaper in Chicago wherein our membership is employed, making the false claim in all such appeals that organized labor in Chicago and throughout the country is backing the fight of the Guild on the Chicago newspaper; and

"Whereas, the campaign of terror carried on by the Guild in picketing places of business ordinarily using the columns of the Chicago newspaper for advertising purposes has resulted in causing many business houses to take their advertising out of the paper, thus reducing the demand for the labor of our members; and

AIDED BY COMMUNISTS

"Whereas, the Chicago Federation of Trades and Illinois Federation of Labor have long been active in their support of our membership employed on the Chicago paper by opposing the activities of the CIO Guild; and

"Whereas, the CIO Guild, with the aid of the Communists throughout the country, have carried the fight against the paper into every state in the Union, making it a national boycott against the paper on which our 2000 members are employed; therefore, be it

"Resolved, that the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled, empower the executive council to take whatever action may be necessary to preserve the jobs of our members employed on the Chicago newspaper, and that all state federations of labor, city central labor unions and local unions be requested to counteract the false and erroneous information being supplied the members of our organizations, the public and national advertisers, and be it further

"Resolved, that the misuse of the A. F. of L.'s name by the CIO Guild and its agents be prohibited by the American Federation of Labor."

Air Hostess Death Probed

OAKLAND, Cal., Oct. 12 (AP)—Police continued an investigation today into the death of Miss Lorraine Rosemarie Goodall, 23-year-old airlines hostess whose body was found in her blazing automobile yesterday.

The car was parked at the rear of a closed service station. The doors and windows were shut.

Dr. Gertrude Moore, pathologist, said death had been caused by carbon monoxide poisoning. Battalion Fire Chief Frank Kispert said a bottle which contained a sedative was found in the attractive girl's purse, and that a package of matches fell from her hand when the body was taken from the charred car.

Accept Resignation Of Marblehead Coach

Marblehead's school board today accepted the resignation of Charles McGuinness, since 1929 football coach at Marblehead high school, but under suspension since Sept. 8 on a charge of conduct unbecoming a teacher.

Announcement that the resignation of the 38-year-old coach had been accepted was made by Chairman W. Gerry Martin of the school committee.

At the time of his suspension McGuinness was given formal notification that the board would consider dismissal proceedings at a hearing scheduled for Monday.

The suspension grew out of a complaint by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wood of Gregory st., Marblehead, that McGuinness had been found on a piazza roof of their home, outside the room of their daughter Elsie, 16-year-old attractive high school junior.

The coach, however, declared he was attempting to obtain a letter which Elsie had originally written to him, but which was intercepted by her parents, and which contained passages showing she had a "crush" on him.

McGuinness said Wood had taken the matter of the letter up with him and had threatened to lay the letter before the school board.

Sure Cure For War

BRITAIN SCORNS HITLER, WOOS HIS PEOPLE

no parallel since David Lloyd George announced the armistice to Parliament at the close of the last World War.

He frequently was cheered throughout the speech and accorded a tremendous ovation when he resumed his seat at its conclusion.

WANTS ACTS, NOT WORDS

"We must take it that Hitler's proposals for security are based upon recognition of his conquests and the right to do what he pleases with what he has conquered," said Chamberlain.

"Acts, not words alone, must be forthcoming before we and France would be justified in ceasing to wage war to the utmost of our strength."

Jammed to utmost capacity, the House met in an atmosphere electric with tension. Diplomats, including Ivan Maisky, ambassador of Soviet Russia, and peers from the House of Lords crowded the galleries.

Previously approved by both opposition parties, the declaration was declared as Chamberlain's most momentous since the outbreak of war.

"Last week, in speaking of the Russo-German pact," the prime minister continued, "I mentioned that it contained the suggestion that some peace proposals were likely to be advanced, and I said that if such proved to be the case I could examine them in consultation with the Dominions and France in the light of certain relevant considerations.'

(Editor's Note—These "considerations" were outlined by Chamberlain at the time as knowledge that on frequent occasions Hitler has broken his pledged word. This lack of faith, he said, would have to be taken into consideration whenever any new statements or proposals were forthcoming from the Reich.)

"WANTON AGGRESSION"

Chamberlain traced the history of events immediately preceding outbreak of war, including the invasion and conquest of Poland.

"It is after a wanton act of aggression which cost so many Polish and German lives, sacrificed to satisfy Hitler's own insistence on the use of force that he now puts forward his proposals," the prime minister said.

"If there existed any expectation that in these proposals would be included some attempts to make amends for this grievous crime against humanity, following so soon after violation of the rights of Czechoslovakia, it has been doomed to disappointment.

"Hitler regards the fate of Poland as a matter for consideration of Germany alone, to be settled solely in accordance with German interests. The final shaping of this territory, according to him, is a problem exclusively for Russia and Germany.

PEACE UP TO GERMANY

"Acts, not words alone, must be forthcoming before we and France would be justified in ceasing to wage war to the utmost of our strength."

"The issue is plain," he continued.

"Either the German government must give convincing proof of the sincerity of her desire for peace by definite acts and provision of effective guarantees of their intention to fulfill these undertakings, or we must persevere in our duty to the end.

"It is for Germany to make her choice."

Chamberlain referred to Hitler's broken pledges regarding Czechoslovakia and his promise to make no further territorial demands in Europe after the Sudetenland was returned to the Reich.

WON'T TAKE HIS WORD

"Nor," he said, "can we pass over Hitler's departure from his professed principles by his inclusion in the Reich of so many millions of Poles and Czechs and his pact with the Soviets after his repeated violent denunciations (of Communism).

"This repeated disregard of Hitler's word and his reversals of policy have led to a fundamental difficulty in dealing with the wider proposals in his speech.

"The plain truth is that after our past experience it is no longer possible to rely upon the unsupported word of the present German government.

"It is no part of our policy to exclude from its rightful place in Europe a Germany which will live in amity and confidence with other nations.

"On the contrary, I believe that no effective remedy can be found for the world's ills that does not take into account the just claims and needs of all countries.

"Whenever the time may come to draw the lines of a new peace settlement, His Majesty's government would feel that the future would hold little hope unless such a settlement could be reached through a method of negotiation and agreement.

"For no vindictive purpose we embarked upon war, but simply in defense of freedom and it is not alone the freedom of small nations that is at stake," Chamberlain declared solemnly.

PERIL TO ALL FREEDOM

"There is also jeopardy of the peaceful existence of Britain, the Dominions, India, the rest of the British empire, France and all freedom-loving countries.

"Whatever may be the issue of the present struggle, whatever way it may be brought to a conclusion, the world will not be the same world we have known before.

"Looking into the future, we can see deep changes that will inevitably leave a mark in every field of thought and action.

"His Majesty's government knows all too well that in a modern war between great powers, victor and vanquished must alike suffer a cruel loss.

"But surrender to wrongdoing would spell extinction of all hope and annihilation of all those values of life which through the centuries have been a mark of inspiration to human progress.

BID TO GERMAN PEOPLE

"We seek no material advantage for ourselves and desire nothing from the German people which should offend their self-respect.

"We are not only aiming at victory, but rather looking beyond to laying the foundation of a better international settlement which will mean that war will not be the inevitable lot of every succeeding generation.

"It is certain that all peoples of Europe, including the people of Germany, long for peace—a peace that will enable them to live their lives without fear, to devote their energies and their gifts to development of their culture, pursuit of their ideals and improvement of their material prosperity.

"The peace which we are determined to secure must be a real and settled peace, not an uneasy truce interrupted by constant alarms and repeated threats.

"What stands in the way of such peace?

FULL ALLIED ACCORD

"It is the German government alone, for it is they who by repeated acts of aggression have robbed all Europe of tranquility and implanted in the hearts of all neighbors an ever present sense of insecurity and fear."

Chamberlain emphasized the complete agreement between the British and French and the British and Poland governments.

"Hitler," the Prime Minister said, "rejected all suggestions for peace until he had overwhelmed Poland as he had previously overthrown Czechoslovakia.

"Peace conditions cannot be acceptable which begin by condoning aggression.

"The proposals in Hitler's speech were vague and uncertain. They contain no suggestion for righting the wrongs done to Czechoslovakia and Poland.

"Even if Hitler's proposals were more closely defined and contained suggestions to right these wrongs, it would still be necessary to ask by what practical means the German government intends to convince the world that aggression will cease and pledges be kept.

"Only when world confidence has been restored will it be possible to find—as we would wish to do with the aid of all who show good will—solutions to those questions which disturb the world and which stand in the way of disarmament, retard restoration of trade and prevent improvement of the well-being of peoples.

"There is thus a primary condition to be satisfied.

"Only the German government can fulfill it.

"If they will not, there can as yet be no new or better world order of the kind for which all nations yearn."

Move in London to Switch to War on Russia?

LONDON, Oct. 12 (INS)—Growing fear in London financial quarters that Soviet Russia may be emboldened to menace England was expressed by a military commentator in the London Evening Standard today.

"There is growing fear in British business circles that Stalin is really giving Hitler such a diplomatic hiding that he is beginning to threaten us," the writer said.

"A movement is already under way to 'switch the war.'"

Germany Unruffled By Anglo-Red Pact; Expects to Profit

By PIERRE J. HUSS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, Oct. 12 (INS)—Possibility of eventual German profit from the Anglo-Russian barter agreement was voiced in Berlin today as diplomatic and financial angles of the European war overshadowed military developments.

The deal caused no visible perturbation in German quarters, and while no official statement was made authoritative quarters pointed out that there is nothing in the Russo-German agreement preventing the Soviets from making bargains with whomever they please.

Diplomatic quarters said that on the other hand there was nothing to stop Russia from relaying the British rubber and tin she will receive in exchange for timber to Germany.

Meanwhile, it was learned that in addition to the luxury liner Bremen, some 20 large and small German merchant ships are lying in Murmansk harbor. It was understood that a movement is now afoot to offer them to neutral bidders.

BREMEN NOT INCLUDED

There was no definite indication that the Bremen would be included in the sale, or whether the United States would be regarded as a satisfactory purchaser.

As talks began in Moscow between Soviet officials and a delegation from Finland, chief German interest centered on conclusion of Russo-Turkish negotiations. Turkey's future role will be "definitely clarified," official quarters said.

Soviet Russia has informed Berlin that Turkish relations with Russia are of primary importance to Turkey's existence.

Only "slight" activity occurred on the western front and over the North sea today, according to an announcement by the German high command.

(Editor's Note—A dispatch from Paris said the Germans had launched the heaviest raid yet seen on the western front on a plateau east of the Moselle river.)

FRENCH PLANE DOWNED

An official war communique stated that the German advance in Poland to the Russo-German military demarcation line was progressing, adding:

"There was slight patrol and artillery activity on the western front and slight air scouting over the North Sea.

"On the western front, one French plane was shot down in an air battle south of Lauterbourg."

Meanwhile, announcing successful aerial attacks upon the British fleet, Germany claimed that the "days of unrestricted British control of the North Sea are gone forever."

PEACE DRIVE PRESSED

Meanwhile the German press carried on its campaign in support of Chancellor Hitler's peace overtures. Diplomatic Correspondence, organ of the German foreign office, denied a statement by French Premier Daladier that Germany aspires to domination of Europe.

"Germany," said Correspondence, "feels superior to such reproach because she wants to live and work with all people of Europe in peace and friendship.

"Germany is ready to forget what happened in the past. She is ready for an understanding, but measures to harm the German people will receive a proper reception."

Roosevelt Wants War Aid Pooled

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 (AP)—President Roosevelt urged today that relief agencies collecting funds in this country to aid European war victims co-ordinate their activities with the Red Cross.

In a statement issued and drafted with the approval of Sec. Hull and Norman Davis, Red Cross chairman, the President said he hoped this would be done to "prevent duplication and confusion avoid waste and promote the utmost efficiency."

Mr Roosevelt said that in disasters "we naturally turn to the American Red Cross" but as the war went on there undoubtedly would be need for relief work in addition to that which comes within the scope of that organization.

"It is my hope," he said, "that in their activities these groups will supplement and not conflict with the work of agencies already established."

U. S. Sends Russia Plea to Save Finns

ment's action was "entirely appropriate."

U. S. ACTS ALONE

Members of Congress almost unanimously expressed the great esteem in which this country holds Finland, the only country of Europe which has rigidly maintained its payments upon its war debt to the United States.

Information in authoritative quarters was that this government's appeal to Moscow expressed the hope that nothing may occur that "would be calculated to affect injuriously the peaceful relations between Soviet Russia and Finland."

It was also emphasized that the American government's action was unilateral and entirely independent of that of any other government.

This information substantiates earlier expressions by American diplomatic officials that the United States government was extremely reluctant to join any of the Scandinavian nations in making representations in Finland's behalf.

Official quarters refused to speculate on just what these unstated representations on the part of the United States government may have on Moscow's attitude toward Finland.

There was uncertainty in official quarters as to what further step this government could take if its representations should fail.

The move to aid Finland by this government followed two days of feverish diplomatic activity in Washington by diplomats of Finland and the Scandinavian triumvirate.

SCANDINAVIAN PROTEST

Although Sweden, Norway and Denmark apparently entreated the United States to make representations in Finland's behalf, neither the State Department nor the White House would confirm or deny receiving such a request.

The government, it was apparent, was moving through regular diplomatic channels. It pointed out, however, that the State Department would not plan such a step without full approval from President Roosevelt.

In that connection it was stated that Hjalmar Procope, Finnish Minister to the United States, had called at the White House yesterday, and that the President had conferred with Wollmar Boström, Swedish Minister, Tuesday.

It was plainly evident that the United States wanted nothing to happen on the international checkerboard to disturb the peace of the Scandinavian countries.

U.S. PLEA GIVES HOPE TO FINNS

HELSINGFORS, Oct. 12 (INS)—Finland today received with immense jubilation and a great surge of hope news flashed from Washington that America is asking Moscow not to disturb Russo-Finnish peace.

Thanks to America's measures—and parallel action expected from Sweden and Norway—Finns no longer regard the situation as hopeless. Nevertheless military and naval preparations and the evacuation of major cities went on incessantly.

One hundred thousand more troops were called into active service.

The government, it was reported, is closing the ports of Helsingfors, Hango, Viborg, Hanka and Kota to Finnish shipping to minimize the danger of their ships' seizure by Russia. The order does not affect foreign vessels.

With Russo-Finnish consultations under way in Moscow no word has been received yet as to the form Russian demands may take.

WIN PUBLIC FAVOR

Evacuation progresses without panic, many mothers volunteering for the army or the home protection corps as soon as wives and children quit the cities.

Warm sympathy for the position of Finland is expressed in the Scandinavian press generally, and the hope is expressed that Russia always has expressed a desire for peace and good neighborly relations.

Summoning of the new troops will bring Finland's effective army to about half its full war strength of 600,000 troops.

Members of the Finnish Protection Corps, were called up along with new army reservists. Their task was designated as "neutrality guard work." Authorities emphasized however, that Finland had not ordered a general mobilization.

Reports from Moscow said Russia probably would demand from Finland a mutual assistance pact similar to those concluded by the U. S. S. R. with Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, save that no Soviet garrisons may be placed on Finnish territory.

According to these advices, not officially confirmed, the Russians also may demand that a number of small Finnish islands barring the approaches to Leningrad be handed over to the U. S. S. R. and that the two nations enter into a system of closer political and economic co-operation. Russia also may request "expulsion" of Germans from Finland, it was stated.

Soviets Give Finns Chilly Reception

MOSCOW, Oct. 12 (INS)—With Dictator Josef Stalin personally representing the Soviet Union, negotiations with Finland for the extension of Russian influence in the Baltic began in Moscow today.

At exactly three p. m. Dr. Juho Paasavkivi, Finnish minister to Stockholm and specially selected emissary for the present discussions, was ushered into a room at the Kremlin where Stalin and Vyacheslev M. Molotov, premier and foreign commissar, were waiting.

While details of the Russian demands were not known, it was believed the USSR would seek concessions from Finland similar to those obtained from Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

No comment was available in Moscow regarding reports that Finland was taking drastic military measures to safeguard her independence and that the Scandinavian nations had requested that the United States intercede with Russia on Finland's behalf.

City Fines Self For Failing to Blackout Hall

PLYMOUTH, Eng., Oct. 12 (AP)—The city of Plymouth was ordered to pay a fine of £2 (about $8) to itself today for failure to blackout the Guildhall.

The magistrate who imposed the fine said it was merely taking money out of one pocket and putting it in another, but the conviction would be on the record at any rate.

Police had complained that the Guildhall, while being used for coal rationing purposes, was brilliantly lighted. The city replied that the police had arrived only a few minutes after blackout time and that the work was nearly finished.

NAZIS SPAN RHINE, PREPARE BIG PUSH

By KENNETH T. DOWNS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Oct. 12 The first indication of where the spearhead of Germany's offensive may strike on the western front were seen today in reports that Nazi engineers have begun to construct pontoon bridges across the Rhine near Mayence (Mainz) and across the Saar river, just south of Luxembourg.

These reports were received in Parish as German troops took the initiative in the west and carried out the heaviest raid the Saar sector has seen since commencement of hostilities.

The pontoon bridges will facilitate massing and movement of troops.

The deduction from these reports is that the pivot of the German offensive will be in the vicinity of Luxembourg, with rigot and loft wings sweeping widely in a double envelopment movement by way of Belgium, Holland and Switzerland.

REPORT MANY CASUALTIES

Activity all along the front is increasing constantly.

The raid on a plateau east of the Moselle river near the Luxembourg frontier was believed to have involved two full companies of German troops. It was accompanied by a heavy artillery barrage on French positions.

Reports from the front, however, said it was repulsed after "hot fighting" in which there were numerous casualties. The German raiders, military advices added, failed in their purpose of capturing French prisoners.

The action was shrouded under the wording of today's military communique, No. 77, which stated:

"Activity of first line elements was extended on several sectors of the front between the Moselle and Rhine rivers during the night."

NAZI FLIER SHOT DOWN

German raids and patrol activities are growing more intense and more frequent. However, there still has been no concerted German attack.

With incessant rains continuing along the entire front, aerial observation has been sharply restricted, although French fliers reported they found a hole in the clouds over the German lines at one point and made "very interesting photographs" of German positions.

Reports from the battle front said the Germans recently have been sending out reconnaissance patrols consisting of several companies of seasoned, war-toughened troops.

But on the Western Front the Germans have met the systematically consolidated advance French lines, which have fought them off with withering fire.

Hitler Branded 'Criminal,' as All OK Chamberlain

LONDON, Oct. 12 (INS)—Members of the opposition in the House of Commons today quickly rallied to the support of Prime Minister Chamberlain's rejection of Chancellor Hitler's vague peace terms.

Clement A. Attlee, Laborite leader, branded Hitler's word as "utterly worthless."

"Britain," Attlee said, "cannot condone a crime ortrust a criminal."

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal chieftain, also supported Chamberlain's stand, and urged the German people to "put their house in order."

McAdoo Adopts His Grandson, 4

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 12 (AP)—The Examiner said today former United States Sen. William G. McAdoo and his wife had adopted his four-year-old grandson, Richard de Onate.

The child is the son of Rafael de Onate, 43, and Ellen Wilson McAdoo de Onate, granddaughter of Woodrow Wilson. The de Onates were married at Albuquerque N. M., in 1931, and divorced three years ago.

The newspaper said the McAdoos adopted the child in a recent superior court action at Santa Barbara. The former Senator, now 77 and his 30-year-old wife, a former public health service nurse, are said to be in Washington, where McAdoo is serving as chairman of the board of the President Steamship Lines.

SORORITY LEADER DIES

ORANGE, Tex., Oct. 12 (AP)—Mrs. Nina Hill Stark, 49, former national grand secretary of the Pi Beta Phi sorority and the wife of the Cupid artist H. J. Luttcher Stark, died here last night.

EX-SLAVE, 110, DIES

MANCHESTER, Ct., Oct. 12 (AP)—Joseph Manuel, a Negro who claimed he was 110 years old, died today at a convalescent home. Manuel was born in slavery and his birth date was unconfirmable, but he was sure he was 32 years old when Fort Sumter was fired on at the start of the Civil War.

Skipper Saw 5 Ships Fight 150 Nazi Fliers

ALESUND, Norway, Oct. 12 (AP)—A Norwegian fishing boat skipper asserted today that he was trapped in the midst of an hour and a half North Sea naval battle Monday afternoon between five British warships and about 150 German planes.

The captain of the fishing boat Kvaloy said bombs dropped on all sides, and the crew, fearing their ship would be sent to the bottom, prepared to take to the lifeboats.

COLUMN OF FIRE

He said as far as his crew could see neither ships nor planes were hit, but after the warships steamed away they heard an explosion and saw a fire column on the horizon.

(Both the German and British admiralties reported a North Sea engagement Monday between planes and warships. The Germans asserted their bombers scored 10 direct hits, but the British contended there was no damage.)

The fishermen were operating near the Viking bank, the skipper reported, when suddenly a "huge number" of warplanes approached from the west and five British warships from the east. He estimated the number of planes at 150.

They started dropping bombs and the ships answered with anti-aircraft fire. Soon the Kvaloy was in the midst of the battle.

TRAPPED IN BATTLE

The warships moved at full speed, following a zigzag course the whole time. The Kvaloy attempted to steer westward out of the battle zone, but the warships moved in the same direction.

Finally the warships withdrew, while the bombing squadrons disappeared eastward.

The skipper said the water was churned by a violent explosion as the crew attempted to pull up a net after the battle and he said he thought a bomb must have been caught and exploded when it was moved.

States customs officials inspected her for possible arms. She sailed only 36 hours before Germany invaded Poland. Many sources subsequently reported she had reached Murmansk safely. Murmansk is above the Arctic Circle.

(The Frankfurter Zeitung reported on Oct. 5 that the crew —more than 900 men—returned to Bremerhaven, the Bremen's home port, on Sept. 29 and that Capt. Ahrens had been promoted to Commodore by Adolf Hitler.)

KEPT ROUTE SECRET

"Nobody knew what route would be taken," Post said.

"We were making fun of the fact that everybody in the world was asking 'Where is the Bremen?' but the prospect of running the English blockade was not very cheering.

"The first morning out everybody who had nothing more urgent to do, including butchers, stewards and cooks, plus a few sailors, all got pots of gray paint. Lifeboats were swung out and the men applied the paint to the sides of the ship, wielding paint brushes with long handles.

"In no time the Bremen was not the Breme nany more. You may have heard 'pump or drown' but we had to 'paint or drown.' In the mist at 200 meters (656 feet) distance you could not have seen the Bremen.

RADIO CALLS IN VAIN

"The Bremen was called by radio from various stations, but of course kept silent. And you know the proverb: 'Be as silent as a German.' Among the almost 1000 members of the crew there came a terrible tension as nobody know where we were going.

"Later in the day of Sept. 3 the captain, standing in the center, said:

"'Men, war in Europe has started. It doesn't look very good for us, for I've sworn that the English won't seize me and my ship while I'm alive. I would rather sink the Bremen.'

"Everybody gave the Nazi salute except myself, the only Hollander on board. For, to be frank, as a Hollander, the prospect of disappearing below the surface for good didn't attract me very much. But what could I do? I was in it and had to go on now, willingly or not.

TORCH LAID ON DECK

"From the icy cold we concluded we were far up North, which proved to be the case afterward.

"We were again called together by the captain who told us that between England and Iceland there was a watch of English ships every 10 miles; that they might not be men-o'-war, but anyhow, they were ships ready to seize us and take us in.

"Drills were conducted regularly to ensure that we would be able to get into the lifeboats as quickly as possible in case of an emergency. All day we were listening in for alarm signals which were set up everywhere in the ship.

"The cabins of the crew in the for of the ship were left vacant so that in case of a collision the crew would be safer. Barrels of gasolene were on deck so that if e English men-o'-war neared the Bremen could be at on fire.

"Everybody took a few things with him to carry in the lifeboats. Trunks and suitcases, of course, were not allowed. Under these circumstances we got very little sleep. We did not undress as at any moment we might come across a trawler or some other vessel which might seize us. Numb with cold, sailors were on the lookout in the crow's nest or on thee foreship.

UNDER RUSSIAN GUNS

"At last we learned we were somewhere between Iceland and Spitzbergen.

"On the morning of Sept. 6, three days after the outbreak of war, we sighted the coast of Nurmansk. As we came near the shore we saw a man-o'-war which afterward appeared to be a Russian cruiser. I suppose the Bremen had never enter port under such conditions.

"At the foremast there was only the flag of the company and the Russian hammer and sickle and behind that the Swastika flag. Outside Murmansk we got a Russian pilot officer. He saluted in the ordinary way with hand at cap and not with a raised fist. Then we were anchored in the bay of Murmansk.

"We were not allowed to go ashore, but that didn't matter, for during the daytime we were looking at snowy mountains and in evenings we were in a large assembly room looking at movies of listening to the ships orchestra. After we had seen our films we borrowed others from other Berman ships, fro every day more German freight and passenger ships entered port.

HAD TO GIVE UP CASH

"Everybody hadt o deliver his papers to the captain, also his part of $2000 which was divided among the crew during the journey back. Seventy cooks on board had very little to do as there were no passengers to look after.

"One day the German ambassador came on board to discuss the situation with the captain. We heard that together with other crews we would go to Leningrad by train and from there in German ships to Kiel and then to Bremerhaven.

"We were not allowed to write letters and only hoped that the North German Lloyd would inform our relatives. The only news we heard from the German radio, for we were not allowed to listen to other stations."

Post said the crew of the Bremen left Murmansk on Sept. 18 and reached Leningrad three days later about twice the normal time. He explained that the delay was due to Soviet troop movements.

He said Kiel was reached Sept 26 and an overnight stop made before proceeding through the canal to Bremerhaven.

Have Two at $3.98 Each!

● EVEN my artist—who sketches dresses day in and day out—was all in a dither about these three at $3.98. Just look at the clever details on this softened classic. Note the graceful, flared skirt with its un-pressed pleats—the parade of silver metal buttons! It has a bright silver belt—comes in a softly flecked rayon and wool—sizes 12 to 20. Blue—green and grey—$3.98 in Filene's California Corner, SIXTH Floor.

● HURRY in to see this young, spirited dress with the new soft bosom fullness—deliriously full, feminine skirt. There's youth in every line! It zips down the front to emphasize the trim, tiny waist. Comes in a nubby fleck—part rabbits hair wool, part rayon. In green —blue—grey—and ALSO in black rayon faille! Sizes 12 to 20—$3.98 in Filene's California Corner, SIXTH Floor.

● THIS buttoned-to-the waist classic, in a rich cross bar tweed rayon and wool, will go places with all the poise of a much more expensive dress. It has the front fullness you want in the flared, gored skirt. Comes in grey, blue, green—sizes 14 to 20—$3.98. Filene's California Corner, SIXTH Floor.

● NOTE: These dresses illustrated and described, were selected at FILENE'S by Ann Sawyer. Though merchandise stocks were adequate when fashions featured here were chosen, neither the store cooperating nor the Record-American is responsible for their depletion, price change or typographical error.

NAVY MEN TAKE IN FREIGHTER

With fourteen soldiers aboard, a U. S. Navy quartermaster standing by the wheel, and with a naval machinists' mate in the engine room—all to forestall possible sabotage—the Kaimoku, American owned came through the Panama Canal on its way to Boston, arriving today.

Capt. T. H. Cunningham, the skipper, told of the extraordinary precautions now taken to prevent deliberate jamming of canal locks. Foreign ships, he said, are actually steered by a navy man, while another is at the throttle in the engine room.

Suspect ships, he said, are entirely manned by Americans before being allowed to pass through.

The Kaimoku, carrying 20,000 cases of pineapples and 6000 tons of sugar, came direct from Honolulu.

Expect Saltonstall To Name Eckfeldt

Although Governor Saltonstall was silent on his choice, it was expected today that he soon would name Brig. Gen. Roger W. Eckfeldt of the 51st Field Artillery as the new commander general of the 26th Division.

The present commander, Major Gen. Daniel H. Needham will be automatically retired Nov. 17. Others eligible for the appointment include Brig. Gen. William I. Rose of the 51st Infantry and Brig. Gen. Francis V. Logan of the 52nd Infantry.

Tague Secretary Becomes Bride

In the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends in St. Ann's Church, Somerville, today, Mary Margaret Donahue, a secretary in the office of Postmaster Peter F. Tague, became the bride of Arthur Joseph Bousheil of Princeton st., Charlestown.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Joseph Donahue, and the wedding ceremony was performed by the Rev. James P. Donahue, assistant at St. Joseph's Church, North Woburn, a cousin of the bride. Fr. Donahue also was celebrant of the nuptial mass.

The bride was attended by her cousin, Mary Frances Donahue, and the best man was Leo Bousheil, Jr. Ushers were Leo and Henry Bousheil, Theodore Donahue and James Broderick.

Lawrence Housing Project Approved

LAWRENCE, Oct. 12—The Lawrence city council has voted for a $1,650,000 low-rent housing project which will provide modern homes for 250 families now living in sub-standard tenements.

Next step will be formal application for a federal loan of $1,500,000, or 90 per cent of the cost, from the Federal Housing Administration. The funds already have been earmarked for Lawrence, provided the city meets federal requirements.

Big Nazi Liner Seized by British to have been carrying a cargo of foodstuffs and petroleum products.

Shipping circles in Buenos Aires, specula ting on the identity of the German raider which sank the 5000-ton British freighter Clement in the south Atlantic on Oct. 1, considered the Cap Norte a possibility.

It was one of half a dozen German merchantmen which had left Brazilian and Argentine ports since the war and at that time still were unreported.

Shipping men said the speedy Cap Norte would have served well as a raider if she possessed or obtained armaments. The Cap Norte is one of the fastest liners in the south Atlantic.

When she sailed from Recife, port of Pernambuco, she was heavily loaded with fuel and accompanied by two German freighters, both of them also carrying fuel and foodstuffs.

The Hamburg-South American liner was disclosed Sept. 22 to have sailed with the two other German vessels but their destinations were not divulged.

Shipping circles in Pernambuco said they understood the ships would try to reach Vladivostok, on Soviet Russia's Pacific coast. The Cap Norte carried about 2500 tons of crude oil. Local companies had declined to supply the ships with fine oils such as are used by submarines.

Man Fails to Land Job, Is Found Shot

WORCESTER, Oct. 12 (AP)—Leon A. French, 22, was found shot in the chest this morning in his home shortly after he had returned from a four-mile walk to a factory where he had been promised a job which failed to materialize.

His condition was reported to be "very critical" at City Hospital.

Friday, 13th, Her Bridal Day

Smart Set Functions

By BETTY ALDEN

BOSTON DEBS have had parties in all sorts of unique and interesting settings . . . but as far as we know Leila Ernst, who made her debut last November, is the only one to have a party backstage of a big Broadway musical revue . . .

Leila, as you know, is the outstanding deb of the year, having won a Hollywood movie test, and is at present playing a prominent part in "Too Many Girls," the musical show which leaves Boston for New York, Saturday night . . . so when a number of her sister debs acted as ushers at a benefit performance last night, what could have been more appropriate than to have Leila invite them all backstage for a party with the cast . . .

Among her friends who acted as ushers at the benefit for the New England Hospital for Women and Children were Ethel Lang, who wore a novel necklace of gold leaves with her black velvet gown, Sally Brewer in an off-the-shoulder black velvet model with long tight sleeves, blonde Celia Hubbard in a bouffant gown of violet taffeta, and Cynthia Sortwell in a pale gray chiffon with a red fox coat . . .

Wears Strawberry Pink Frock

NANCY McNEIL enhanced her blonde curls with a strawberry pink taffeta frock with a bustle made of rows of pleated taffeta ruffles, Ruth Weyburn, another usher, wore a white fur coat over her tucked black taffeta, and Joanna Hoyt looked as winsome as ever in black velvet with silver fox . . .

Mrs. Robert M. Blackall, chairman of the benefit committee, was an early arrival and made a bright spot in the audience in her scarlet velvet peplum gown . . . Mrs. Frederick Ernst, Leila's mother, attended with a party of friends, and Cynthia Burrage and her beau whiled away an enjoyable evening at the show before going out to Weston to Nancy Putnam Smith's debut ball . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Cabot, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Pentecost evidently decided on the spur of the moment to try to get some tickets and see the show and Anne Ayer, but the S. R. O. sign was up so they had to go across the street to the movies . . . Mrs. Cabot, a recent bride, wore a modish royal blue velveteen day time frock with a black taffeta hat . . .

Mrs. Francis Barnum got a big kick out of being taken to the theater and dancing afterwards by her son Francis, Jr., a senior at Harvard . . . He made a special occasion of it by sending her an orchid to wear with her pale blue chiffon gown . . . Several of her associates on the Morning Musicales committee, including Mrs. A. Barr Comstock and Miss Elizabeth Leland, were also there . . . Mrs. Comstock's daughter, Dorothy, was head usher . . .

Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Jr., attended with Mrs. William Endicott and also strolling down the aisle to their seats were Betsy Chalifoux and her escort in a foursome with her brother, Francis, and Lucile Swift . . . The latter's long sleeved chartreuse dinner gown had a bodice of vividly stripped lame . . . Mr. and Mrs. Wallace L. Pierce, Mr. and Mrs. James Carter, the Richard Maclaurins, Anne Whipple, Kay Baker, Lem White, Bobby Knowles, and Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Winthrop, Jr., were also in the audience . . .

Brookline Bride

HELEN FOSTER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Foster of Brookline, becomes the bride of William A. Burnham, Jr., also of Brookline, at a fashionable wedding in the Gordon Chapel of the Old South Church this afternoon . . .

The bride, a member of the Junior League and Vincent Club, is wearing a gown of white satin with a long veil and train of old family lace . . . She is carrying gardenias and bouvardia . . . Her sister, Sally, the maid of honor, is wearing lavender taffeta with a small hat of purple velvet and a bouquet of white chrysanthemums . . .

The five bridesmaids, clad in purple taffeta with matching velvet hats are Persis Mason, Ruth Talbot, Mrs. Charles Wells Hubbard, 3d, Mrs. Henry Bowen White, and Mrs. Nathan Talbot.

Anne Doyle Holiday Bride

Anne Marie Doyle . . . daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Doyle of Roslindale . . . became the bride of Frederick Vincent Murphy, Jr., of Attleboro, this morning in Holy Name Church, West Roxbury.

the ceremony followed by a reception at Longwood Towers.

Miss Doyle . . . gowned in ivory moire, fashioned with heart-shaped neckline, long, tight sleeves and full skirt . . . her tulle veil draped from a snug little moire cap . . . was preceded altarward by her sisters . . . Helen, as maid of honor . . . Dorothy, as bridesmaid.

They carried arm bouquets of African daisies with their ankle-length frocks of sheer wool . . . autumn red for the honor attendant . . . amethyst for the bridesmaid.

John Killion of Attleboro was Mr. Murphy's best man.

WHAT ARE CAUSES OF INDIGESTION? | DO CERTAIN FOODS CAUSE ACID SALIVA?

By DR. WALTER H. EDDY

Director of Good Housekeeping Bureau

Will you please explain what causes indigestion? If it is due to certain foods, list those that do not cause indigestion. Mrs. T. M. B.

The causes of indigestion are numerous. You may have eaten too much. You may have eaten when you were tired and your digestive system would not work well. There may be a definite functional disturbance in your digestive apparatus. The only way to be sure is to have the cause of your indigestion definitely diagnosed by a competent physician.

But do not assume that certain foods will always leave you free of trouble, and that certain other foods will always cause it. Foods are entirely innocent in this respect. Any combination properly balanced will give you satisfactory digestive results if you obey the rules of proper eating, exercising etc.

Get Your Minerals From Foods

Is it harmful or beneficial for a child to drink artificially softened water habitually?

Mrs. E. L. P.

The amount of minerals carried by hard water, especially the amount of lime that the body would derive therefrom, is exceedingly small. Even hard water would not compensate for minerals in the satisfactory diet.

If you will make good use of dairy products, fruits, and vegetables, you will get all that you need; and you can use the artificially softened water for what it provides: namely, water. The softening process introduces no harmful element.

Acid Mouth

I am troubled with acid saliva to the extent that it causes my teeth to decay. Can you tell me what foods to avoid to lower this mouth acidity? H. L. F.

I can not tell you specifically what foods increase or lower the acid content of saliva, for I know of no experimentation which provides such a list. I personally conducted some tests to determine the effect of food substances such as sugar, protein, etc., on the acidity and phosphorus content of saliva, and one of the findings of these tests was that the changes are transitory.

The acidity and phosphorus content of saliva immediately after a meal differs from that in the middle of the afternoon following the meal. Until we know the duration of effect of any food upon the saliva the reply to your inquiry is impossible.

HAM AND VEGETABLE CASSEROLE

(Tested by Good Housekeeping Institute)

INGREDIENTS

2 tbsp. fat or salad oil
2 peeled, sliced, medium onions
1 No. 2 can (2½ c.) tomatoes
1 tsp. granulated sugar
½ tsp. pepper
1 bay leaf
¼ c. uncooked white rice
2 c. cooked ham, cut in small pieces
½ c. cooked corn
1 c. cooked string beans

METHOD OF PREPARATION

Melt fat in a skillet, add onions, and cook until they are tender but not brown. Add remaining ingredients and mix thoroughly. Turn into a greased casserole and bake in a moderately hot oven of 400° F. for 1 hr. and 15 min. Serves 6. To serve 3 make half this recipe.

SERVE with tomato juice, mashed sweet potatoes on pineapple rings, sponge cake and tea, for dinner.

DAVID TAYLORS PREPARE APARTMENT

Mrs. David Taylor (Connie Matless) is having busy days measuring for draperies and selecting appropriate furniture for the apartment she and her bridegroom have taken on River st.

In the meantime she and Dave are spending October at the summer home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Matless in Cohasset.

Cataldo-Nazzaro Ceremony

One of the holiday's most attractive brides was Georgina Nazzaro, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Nazzaro of Dorchester, who exchanged marriage vows with Henry J. Cataldo this morning.

Monsignor Richard J. Haberlin performed the ceremony in St. Paul's Church, Dorchester, followed by a wedding breakfast at the Hotel Touraine.

Olga Nazzaro was her sister's maid of honor, and the bridesmaid group included Lydia Repucci, Milton; Marie Ruggerio, Frances Cifrino, Eleanor O'Neill and Margaret Cataldo, all of Dorchester; and Helen Caruso of Cambridge. Shirey Cataldo was flower girl.

Anthony Caprio of Revere was best man for Mr. Cataldo, whose usher squad comprised Lawrence, Joseph and Edmund Nazzaro, Edmund and George Cataldo and Louis Tentindo.

The bridegroom . . . son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Cataldo of Medford . . . is a graduate of Harvard College, class of 1932, and Harvard Law 1936. He is counsel for the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

Custards Culinary Triumph

By MARTHA LEE

Smooth creamy custards are culinary triumphs everyone appreciates. They are delicious desserts and are extremely wholesome ones too, with the main ingredients, milk and eggs —a perfect "top-off" for economy meals.

The smooth texture combines well with fruits to give nutritious, appetizing desserts, simply made. A clever "meal-planner" serves them often, for there are dozens of interesting variations to change the flavor.

"Hand-to-mouth" menu planning can be avoided with a dish of custard in the refrigerator at all times. Children thrive on simple puddings and will never grow tired of custard in some shape or form. If children come home from school or play, hungry, serve them a dish of custard.

The whole family will enjoy apple charlotte topped with creamy custard.

GOLDEN CUSTARD

2 egg yolks
1 whole egg
1½ cups milk
⅛ cup sugar
1 tbsp. flour
Pinch salt
½ tsp. vanilla

Beat egg yolks and whole egg thoroughly; add milk and mix. Combine sugar, flour and salt; add egg and milk mixture slowly. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly, until mixture coats spoon and is slightly thickened. Remove from heat immediately and add vanilla Chill before serving. Serves six.

APPLE CHARLOTTE

3 cups sweetened apple sauce
1 tbsp. gelatin
¼ cup cold water
½ tsp. cinnamon
2 egg whites

Choose tart-flavored cooking apples for the apple sauce, adding a little lemon juice if necessary to bring ou the flavor. Soak genatin in the cold water for five minutes; melt in a little hot apple sauce. Add cinnamon and rest of apple sauce. Chill until mixture begins to congeal; beat egg whites until stiff and fold into apple sauce mixture. Pour into individual molds and chill until firm; serve with golden custard.

BAKED HONEY CUSTARD

1 qt. milk
5 eggs, slightly beaten
½ cup honey
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. cinnamon

Scald milk. Combine eggs, honey and salt; add milk slowly, stirring until well blended, add cinnamon. Turn into small custard cups, place in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) 25 to 30 minutes, or until firm. Cool.

PUMPKIN CUSTARD PUDDING

3 eggs, separated
¾ tsp. salt
½ cup sugar
1 cup canned pumpkin
¼ tsp. nutmeg
¼ tsp. cinnamon
2 cups milk, scalded
½ cup heavy cream, whipped

Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored, add salt, sugar, pumpkin and spices; stir in milk. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into greased baking dish and bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) 45 minutes, or until firm. Cool, and serve with whipped cream. Makes 6 portions.

CHEESE CUSTARD

2¼ cups milk
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. paprika
1 cup grated American cheese
1 tbsp. melted butter
Nutmeg

Scald milk; add seasonings, cheese and butter. Pour slowly over eggs, mixing well. Turn into greased baking dish, dust with nutmeg, place in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for 50 minutes, or until set. Makes 6 portions.

CHILDREN thrive on simple puddings and will never grow tired of custard in some shape or form. A dish of custard will satisfy the craving for something sweet, and will help to meet the daily requirement of milk each day.

Birthday Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Thursday, Oct. 12

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY—You are observing, temperamental, gifted in many directions, inclined to procrastination. Today's bright, high-spirited child will need to be taught self-mastery in its formative years. Grown-ups and youngsters alike: Quick temper and a tendency to caustic speech will be your undoing if you permit them leeway. Spiritual development will be your great benefactor. Interesting, even if problematical, years ahead.

Send 12 cents and large self-addressed stamped envelope to Frances Drake, Boston American, Box 2122, Boston, for an individual horoscope, personal guide and lucky calendar for the second six months of 1939, giving the day and month you were born.

You Can Be Beautiful

New Foaming Bath Oil

By ARLINE GOULD

NOW THEN . . . relax, little one . . . dream away five minutes, ten or 15 . . . in a perfumed bath that smells of flowers in the rain . . . under a whispering, gently rocking blanket of bubbling bubbles . . . you can't go wrong, on such a recipe for peace of mind and a tranquil look to replace harassment in your face . . .

You may have a luxuriously satisfying, resting bubble bath now without throwing away all your hard-earned subsistance on it . . . because the only existing (as far as we know) foaming bath oil has just arrived in town.

You need use no more than two teaspoons of this miracle-minded foaming oil. Naturally, you must let the water run full force, if you're to see the majestic rise of shimmering bubbles.

And just think how long such an economical use of bath oil will make the four-ounce bottle ($1.25) last! It's wonderful!

Slightly less expensive than the exhilaration "flowers in the rain" fragrance is the ever-soothing pine foaming bath oil. However, we understand you'll have to wait for your bottle of this one, because it's been hard to keep it in stock since it arrived.

If you'd like to learn all about this foaming bath oil, in flowery or pine woods fragrance, phone Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, week days until 5:30, or write, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Are You Proud Of the Guest Room?

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Has your guest room a come hither personality? If you are a hostess given to hospitality, you will be proud when you show your guest into the guest room. First, it will be charming to look at, and then it will be comfortable to stay in.

It's a traditional and excellent piece of advice to suggest that the hostess who really has the comfort of her guests at heart, should make a point of spending a night as a guest in her own guest room. That'll show her just how pleasant and comfortable a room it is, and how adequately it is equipped to meet a guest's requirements.

Dont' jump to the conclusion that I'm going to set forth a list of luxuries for your guest room . . . these concern you and your individual budgets. But what I would like to do is to talk with you about certain details that you may have forgotten to provide. And, far from being expensive luxuries, many of them may be garnered in the basement of your favorite department store or in the five-and-ten.

The first nescessity is a comfortable bed, freshly-made of course, with one medium hard and one soft pillow, with sufficient blankets and with one extra blanket or comfortable on the closet shelf.

The bureau drawers should be empty, and each drawer should be lined with fresh white paper. (Luxury note: sometimes padded satin or silk linings are placed in the lower drawers).

In one of the small drawers the thoughtful hostess puts a tray with plain and safety pins of various sizes, and perhaps a compact box of sewing equipment. On the top of the bureau may be one or two decorative items, but mainly the top should be left uncluttered, to provide space fro the guest's own toilet articles.

On the bed-side table should be a shaded light, a book or two, one or two current magazines.

Love Loves Older Man

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I hope you won't tell me that David is too old for me. He is 31 and I am 20. I love him so much and can't stand those silly youngsters of my own age. I cant be sure that David loves me though he does say he cares a whole lot. I guess all I have to do is wait, but I get so discouraged. He has often said he wouldn't tell a girl he loves her until he is sure he loves her and wants to marry.

Do you suppose he's trying to discourage me? How can I find out what he really thinks?

There have been times when he just sits and apparently is thinking. It is at such moments that he seems the farthest away. I go out with other boys, and if I happen to be with my crowd, I always think of David.

DAVID'S GIRL.

He does sound interesting, from your account of him, but I think you're wise to go out with others. He evidently isn't ready for marriage, and he may not be serious. Why should you, at your age, confine yourself to one boy friend?

THE SEA RAIDERS

Dramatic Story of War's Lone Wolves of the Sea

By FRED PERKINS

SINKING that night into the warm blue tropic ocean, a scant point or two to port of the German sea raider Karlsruhe's knife-sharp bow, the sun was huge and red and fiercely blazing, even to the final moment of its disappearance.

More than 250 of the speeding cruiser's officers and men would not live to see tomorrow's dawn—but now, happily unaware of their fate, they were grateful for a few hours respite from the blistering heat of the day just past!

The vivid color-flare of the sunset faded fast in those latitudes. The stars began pricking out gem-like in the purple dusk. And the sea raider's smart navy band commenced the evening concert.

Nostalgic music of the Fatherland they played. Not battle hymns nor crashing, blood-tingling marches. But the old airs of bierhalle and weinstube, of university and ballroom, of Vienna and Leipsig and Heidelburg.

Listening men hummed soft accompaniment to the instruments.

"Ich weiss nicht was soll es bedeuten, dass ich so traurig bin . . ."

A stalwart gunner's mate, his fair hair in sharp contrast to his deeply bronzed skin, rose to lead an improvised quartet of singers.

Then it happened!

With incredible suddenness, with a roar that dazed and deafened all whom it did not instantly annihilate, the whole amidships section of the Karlsruhe erupted in a terrific explosion.

The blast literally broke the raider's slim, steel racing hull in two.

The forward half, carrying with it bridge and fo'c's'le and 261 men and officers, sank instantly.

The after half stayed afloat for 20 minutes—a brief but precious interval that saved the lives of the 146 who survived to tell what little they knew of the catastrophe!

They were rescued by the Karlsruhe's two attendant colliers, the captured British freighters Indrani and Rio Negro. The date was Nov. 4, 1914.

THERE were no longer British crews on the Indrani and Rio Negro, of course. They were manned, instead, by bluejackets detached from the Karlsruhe's original personnel.

And now that the Karlsruhe had been overtaken by disaster, first thought of the survivors was to keep the tragic news from gloating Allied ears.

Iron secrecy, at all costs, was to surround the raider's loss. There were two principal reasons for this secrecy.

One was German naval pride. And this was the more involved through the fact that there remained great official uncertainty as to exactly what had happened to the Karlsruhe.

Many of the survivors believed they had been torpedoed. Yet no submarine had been sighted, none was supposedly in this area. Only other apparent possibilities were sabotage—unthinkable to loyal German minds—or accident.

To this day, the mystery remains unsolved.

Second reason for suppressing news of the Karlsruhe's destruction was an eminently practical one. It was the hope of avoiding abandonment of the extremely costly and elaborately organized search the British royal navy was conducting for the now non-existent raider.

Public Enemy No. 1 of the North and South Atlantic oceans, the Karlsruhe had been listed by the British Admiralty.

Since early August, 1914, when she had escaped to the neutral U. S. port of San Juan, Puerto Rico, after being caught arming the big North German Lloyd liner Kronprinz Wilhelm in open ocean, northeast of Cuba, the Karlsruhe had destroyed or captured 17 British merchant vessels, including the 10,000-ton Booth liner Vandyke.

The Vandyke, with several hundred passengers and much valuable cargo, had been on a South American run and had been halted, looted and sunk by the Karlsruhe, without the loss of a single life; crew and passengers being transferred to one of the captive freighters trailing the German raider's wake.

The luckless Booth line, incidentally, was also an early sufferer in the present World War of 1939. The Booth freighter, Clement, was sunk without warning off the coast of Brazil, only a fortnight ago.

And the Nazi raider, blamed in this most recent instance of high seas piracy, made no effort to protect helpless non-combatants, with the result that a substantial number of lives were reported lost.

In striking contrast, back in 1914, was the humane and gentlemanly code of gallant Captain Ernst Kohler of the Karlsruhe.

At the risk of his own safety and the safety of his ship, he made certain under all circumstances that freighter crews or liner passengers should be set ashore unharmed.

In the end, only loss of life written down on the record against Captain Kohler was that which ensued when the Karlsruhe exploded. And he himself died that night, in the navy's best tradition, on the bridge of the vessel lost under his command.

One of the Karlsruhe's junior officers, Lieut. Comm. Studt, held senior rank among the 146 survivors. He ordered the auxiliary collier Indrani scuttled. Then, assuming command of the Rio Negro, the remaining collier, he took it home almost to Germany, running the British North Sea blockade and making a safe port at Aalesund, Norway, where he and his men were allowed to proceed unhindered to the Fatherland.

So closely guarded all this time was the secret of the Karlsruhe's loss that on Nov. 27, a mere two days before the Rio Negro reached the Norwegian harbor, German navy wireless stations broadcast a code message to the destroyed raider, notifying her long-dead captain that he had the Kaiser's most gracious and complimentary permission to intern his vessel in safety in the nearest neutral port.

SO the British cruiser squadrons in the North and South Atlantic and the Caribbean continued their wild-goose Karlsruhe chase. And not until after the armistice of 1918 did they learn a substantial portion of the truth.

They also learned then a further bit of highly significant information. This was the fact that the Karlsruhe, at the time of her mysterious explosion, was no longer hunting inoffensive British merchant vessels but was embarked on a far more ambitious naval venture.

The venture was an intended attack on the wealthy and thickly populated British island of Barbados, sub-tropical beauty spot and center of West Indian white society and culture.

Seat of one of the oldest universities in the eastern hemisphere, Barbados—in 1914 as now—was governed by the second oldest parliamentary assembly in all the British dominions.

It was the purpose of Captain Kohler of the Karlsruhe to strike a tremendous blow to British naval prestige by dashing into Bridgetown harbor, Barbados, and shelling not only anchored merchant ships and waterfront but also the city's public buildings and narrow gauge railway.

Had he succeeded in his reckless enterprise—as the raider Emden did about this time in attacking the Malay peninsula harbor of Penang—whole chapters of the naval history of World War might have been written otherwise than they were.

Only 300 miles from Barbados the Karlsruhe was, the night the sun sank so red and hot, the night her band played Die Lorelei, the night the big, yellow-haired gunner led the singing—the night the grim hand of Destiny struck the raider down!

A few more hours of speedy throbbing of her powerful turbines. A few more hours of lucky breaks in dodging the Allied warships swarming in her track. Those were all the Karlsruhe needed!

Lovely, palm fringed Barbados might have echoed next night to the thunder of her guns!

WAS it really an accident that stopped her? Was it sabotage? Or was it perhaps one of Germany's own far-ranging U-boats?

There are naval experts today who credit the U-boat hypothesis.

They believe it possible—even probable—that some over-hasty submarine commander, peering through his half-obscured periscope, mistook the Karlsruhe for a British cruiser.

As was her practice, when not in action, the German raider was flying no colors. Even the British, themselves, on occasion, had been fooled into believing her one of their own.

Well, indeed, might a German U-boat have lanced the Kalsruhe to her vitals and fled. Incredibly conscientious and incredibly foolhardy would have been the undersea commander who would have reported his error to Berlin, even if he had finally learned of it.

And furthermore, if it was a U-Boat, that sank the Karlsruhe, that U-boat in its turn would more than likely have fallen a victim, in the end, to British depth bombs.

And dead men, heroes or cul prits, tell no tales!

KEEP U. S. OUT OF WAR
—Be Neutral—

COLUMBUS DAY, America's tribute to the unconquerable courage and independence of spirit of the Italian weaver's son who ventured into the vast unknown of the western sea and found a new continent, was never more important.

The indestructible individualism and unyielding adventurousness that flamed in his soul as he planted the cross of Christian faith on the island of San Salvador 447 years ago still glow with undiminished brilliancy in this, the New World.

Over there, in the Old World, the strife, bitterness, warfare and bloodshed that Christopher Columbus witnessed as a boy in Genoa, as a refugee in Lisbon and as the disillusioned hero years later in Madrid, continue with traditional short-sightedness and madness.

The 33 major wars which the nations of Europe have fought since the Pinta, the Nina and the Santa Maria sailed toward what was supposed to be India have not produced a sincere, abiding desire for peace.

Mars remains king from Gibraltar to Moscow in defiance of the grim fact that on an average of once in every twenty years some portion of the land separating that famous rock fortress and city has been dyed red with human blood.

IT IS THEREFORE FITTING and proper that we honor Columbus as the MAN OF PEACE he truly was.

On our shores he experienced the only real happiness in his 55 years of earthly existence.

Here, he realized his lifelong ambition, saw unspoiled lands, thrilled to the challenge of a new and freer way of living.

There, having returned as the greatest man of his age, he was thrown into prison, humiliated, impoverished and made the innocent victim of jealousy and intrigue.

The conflict that sweeps Europe today would not surprise Columbus, were it possible for him to come back from the grave.

He might not recognize the bomb-laden planes flying overhead, the cannons vomiting death or the showers of shrapnel.

But he would recognize the bestial motives of rulers and governments which have changed little since Ferdinand of Aragon was campaigning against the Moors.

AS A CONSEQUENCE, let our observances today be more than mere parades, pyrotechnic displays and oratorial gestures.

Let us firmly resolve never again to go over there or bring Europe over here and thus destroy the boundless hope of liberty and independence that Columbus and the thousands of illustrious men who followed his westward course bequeathed to us as the heirs of a new continent and vision.

Let us as proud and grateful Americans solemnly say:

"Keep your wars, Europe, and fight them if you must.

"We have peace in the United States, and to the limit of our strength and determination WE WILL PRESERVE IT."

MASS WEIGHT REDUCING, reported ordered by the War Department for members of the country's 18 National Guard divisions and the Reserve Officers Corps, will cause many headaches for the affected men.

If statistics are to be believed, the average man of today is taller and heavier than the average man of the World War period 20 years ago.

TODAY'S SOLDIERS
Heavier and Taller

This interesting information was first published by Dr. Laurence B. Chenoweth, University of Cincinnati professor of hygiene, who found that present day first-year students are 1.98 inches taller and 11.06 pounds heavier than their fathers and older brothers were in 1916.

It is therefore apparent that the taking off of excess pounds will require a great deal more abstinence from fattening foods and vastly more will power than would have been necessary a generation ago.

The War Department does not say what has inspired the "get thin" command, although most people assume it is because Army authorities share the generally accepted opinion that lean men are healthier and less disposed to disease.

Those who entertain this belief always point out that the famous giants of history died young; that Pefer Tuchan, eight feet seven inches, and Byrne O'Brien, eight feet four inches, both failed to reach their 30th birthdays, and that Christopher Munster, eight feet six inches, Patrick Cotter, eight feet four inches, Antonius of Syria, seven feet seven inches, and Robert Hale, seven feet six inches, all died before the 50th mark.

On the other hand, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, a few years ago, reported that a study of 20,000 men who were more than six feet two inches showed that they had practically a normal mortality.

See-Saw

FIRST you're up and then you're down . . . and when you're up you see . . . the towers and steeples of the town . . . beyond the old oak tree . . . and sometimes sunset's golden haze . . . on white wings out at sea.

You're never up for very long . . . Not there the pleasure lies . . . Your heart still sings a little song . . . as down you go—then rise—But even from the ground you gaze . . . upward at azure skies.

Human Side of News -:- By EDWIN C. HILL

RUDY SLIFER, our reliable mid-town intelligence service, brings in a strange tale of the current New York jitterbug war.

The story, while related here for its net interest, turns into a sort of parable at the end, but so does pretty nearly everything else in these days. This jitterbug war is between the opposed, more or less juvenile followings of the rival swing kings, Artie Shaw at the Strand, and Glen Miller at the Paramount here in New York.

As the theater becomes a squirrel-cage, with everybody jitterbughouse, the ushers start methodically heaving out casualties and giving them their money back. Then the lads do a St. Vitus down to the other theater only four blocks away, and with their reclaimed admission fee, get two deliriums for the price of one.

NATURALLY, the tossing-out trick is no business for sissies, and in several instances an usher, handling a particularly ga-ga case, has had to call for the reserves, if not for the United States Marines.

The theaters used to pick personable lads for ushers, preferably of slender figure, who look well in gold braid and not be too fumble-footed, gliding up and down the aisles. The real requirement now is for husky boys who can gather up a big fistful of knuckles on occasion, or get a nice bear-trap grip on an undulating collar with exit in order.

EDWIN C. HILL
Reports on Jitterbug War

It has become a rather difficult problem and that is where Eric comes in. Eric is a big, curly-haired blond boy from somewhere in the Middle West, ham-fisted, deep-chested, flat-footed, with bulging muscles and a round dead-pan face which gives him an aspect of complacency and calm.

When he applied at the employment office for a job as usher, the manager almost swallowed his upper plate in his nervous haste to sign him up. Eric was the lad to heave out the jitterbugs. And Eric certainly did. When the zero hour came, his big paw rested quietly but inexorably on the scruff of any disturbed neck and he wrapped the jitterbug gently in 190 pounds of Minnesota muscle and sinew and put him down at the front door as calmly and carefully as if he were depositing an orchid.

THIS WENT ON happily for weeks. There was a story that Eric used to point with a jitterbug, stiffened by a half-nelson, when anybody asked him where his seat was—that's how calm and workman-like he was.

Perhaps you have guessed the next chapter. It started with a slight, reflex twitching of Eric's little finger. Later his Adam's apple became tremulous. One day, moving down the aisle with great dignity, he caught a measure of the broken rhythm in a tiny crow-hop. He stopped, red-faced, pulled himself together and handled the next jitterbug, as usual, like a chunk of cordwood. Several days later he caught himself in a furtive hitch-kick but managed to pull out of it.

That was the beginning of the end. The stage baton let loose a flood of hell's broth which set everybody crazy at once. Eric led the pack, glaucous-eyed, his arms flailing every which way, his big brogues pounding the floor in the wild tangle-foot chaos. They pretty nearly had to call out the U. S. Army this time. Eric now has a job driving a truck, and so far as this jitterbug war goes he's neutral.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt -:- MY DAY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12—By dint of working on my mail until late at night the past two days and using every minute on the trains and the planes, I think I am nearly caught up.

Before I took the train yesterday morning, I had a few minutes in my own apartment in New York City to attend to a little of my long distance housekeeping.

Life is full of little coincidences. On the train to New Haven I sat next to a lady who told me that she came from Rhinebeck, N. Y., and knew well a lady whose family had lived for years in Hyde Park.

People who live on the Hudson River always have a sense of knowing each other, largely, I believe, because all of us love the Hudson River scenery.

I JOINED my mother-in-law in New Haven and she drove back to Hyde Park after the funeral service for Dr. Harvey Cushing. It was an impressive service, but very simple.

The people there indicated how many and how wide had been Dr. Cushing's interests. For all his honors, which made him an international personality, he always seemed such a simple person.

You felt that he enjoyed talking to you, even if you were not one of the brilliant people of the world. I think he would have appreciated the tributes paid to him, but perhaps he would have read them with a little smile which would imply that he set his own standards and lived by them, and that, while he liked the praise of other people, neither praise nor blame was really important unless it came from within his own conscience.

FIRST LADY WITH THE PRESIDENT'S MOTHER
Together, They Attended Funeral of Dr. Harvey Cushing

I CONFESS that when I found myself sitting in the bus waiting to drive back to the Newark airport, I was somewhat weary, but the gentleman who sat down beside me introduced himself as a friend of a friend, and we chatted intermittently on our way to Washington.

One should never make rash observations, but it had been borne in upon me as I travelled through the West that the preponderance of men on planes was very great.

On the train, there seemed to be many more ladies in the diner, and so I made the casual remark that some strange reason, men preferred planes and women preferred trains.

Then we boarded the plane for Washington and the ratio of women was two to one in favor of the female of the species, so generalities are always dangerous.

CARY GRANT FEARS FOR MOTHER

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK, Oct. 12—A few days after the outbreak of war, Cary Grant sent a cable to his London solicitor requesting that precautions be taken for the welfare of his mother and to move her to a place of safety . . . Cary then cabled his mother assuring her that there was no need to worry . . . She replied immediately: "Dear Boy—Don't worry about your mother. She got through the last war all right."

RAYMOND MASSEY was so anxious to get back to New York from Hollywood that he didn't stop to remove his makeup, and took it off during the plane ride . . . Mr. and Mrs. Massey walked out of their front-row seats at "The Streets of Paris," because the objected to the "Chamberlain Crawl" number . . . Eddie DeLange and Jimmy Van Heusen were signed to write the music for the new Benny Goodman show, "Swinging the Dream" . . . The newest lawyers' organization, now being formed in Washington, will be called "Administrative Law Lawyers Association" . . . The American Federation of Actors threatens to rear its influence again as soon as Ralph Whitehead returns.

ALL THE STARS engaged for Clare Boothe's play, which will open in Princeton this week end, will be lodged in private homes there—because the customers for the Princeton-Cornell game booked all the available hotel rooms . . . The Dorchester in London has the safest bomb-proof shelter in the Ladies' Turkish Bath Room . . . Malcolm MacDonald, son of the late Ramsay MacDonald, is rewriting his father's Authentic Diary, for publication next year . . . SOME MEMBERS of the board of directors of the Ballet Russe suggested that the word "Russe" be eliminated, because of the Soviet-Nazi pact, and that its name henceforth shall be "Ballet de Monte Carlo" . . . S. Hurok, the general manager, vetoed their suggestion. "In the first place, 6 different nationalities are represented in the troupe," he reasoned, "and secondly pact or no pact—Russian caviar is still good, no?" . . . Italy is so positive of its neutrality that the Fascist officials cabled Harry Mendel, promoter of the six-day bike races, informing him that he may have as many bike riders as he desires . . . Mrs. Harry Richman is persuading her husband to retire from show business and devote all his time to his commercial enterprises.

JOTTINGS: George Abbott, the Broadway Midas, has found his perfect dancing partner . . . The tall producer of "Too Many Girls" and Diosa Costello, the half-pint rhumba ballerina who works in his show, whirled around together until Johnny Cole and his boys packed their instruments at the Mayfair this morning . . . Also getting their share of stares from those who recognized them at the Mayfair were Moss Hart and Edith Atwater, who were pirouetting at the same spot . . . Miss Atwater is the most beautiful "ingenue" the theater has developed since Jane Wyatt went to Hollywood . . . She is working in Hart's show, "The Man Who Came to Dinner," and Hart a shy guy away from his theater-workshop—has been squiring her considerably . . . Katharine Cornell was nightclubbing again last night . . . George S. Kaufman, the playwright, saw Kit home . . . And what do you imagine was the famous Miss Cornell's latest "request number" in a personal application to Benny Fields? . . . The old tear-jerker, "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now!" . . . My . . .

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY: Guy Lombardo and Tommy Dorsey have been signed already for next summer at the Ritz . . . If winter comes, etc. . . . The Southland has gone the distance in espousing swing for the winter . . . The bands of Teargarden, James, Busse and Lunceford have been booked . . . Fats Waller is attracting the jitterbugs in droves, as well as some spenders . . . Waller is supported by six men only, and it's the column's contention he might get by alone . . . M. Waller is grand in a rendition of "Good Morning" . . . The most costly nightclub in the Greater Boston section is not in Boston, as one might expect . . . It is the sumptuous Hamilton Club on the Revere Beach boulevard in Everett . . . Guy Guarino, the converted boxer, is leading a good band, and the floor show is metropolitan . . . Martha Burke, a Toronto girl, is playing piano with Mickey Alpert's otherwise all-male orchestra at the Cocoanut Grove . . . She is lovely to view, and would rate a feature story if type could be wired for sound . . . the plays so well

EXCLUSIVE: Blossom Seeley, the great star of the musical halls when yours truly and his generation had its salad days, is getting ready to break the news to Benny Fields, her husband, that she is returning to the stage . . . A highly harmonious couple, there will be no disagreement . . . Miss Seeley will drop a word to Times Square next week that she would be interested in a good spot in a revue . . . If the revue happened to have Irving Berlin's words and music, Miss Seeley would like that very much.

MISCELLANEOUS: The Boston police department's mounted troop will be given a radio at the horseshow tonight, a gift of the management of the Fox and Hounds Club . . . I don't know why . . . Another police item is that the narcotic squad is leading all its rival special squads in the Bureau of Criminal Investigation in arrests . . . The dope sleuths will beat out the "sex squad" if it averages two and a half arrests a week until prize-winning day, a month hence . . . Monte Woolley will probably win Broadway's academy award for his performance in "The Man Who Came to Dinner" . . . He has the makings of an American Charles Laughton, and his economic future is a bargain right now at a half-million in cash

BETTE DAVIS ROLE TO OBERON

By Louella O. Parsons

Merle Oberon

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 12 Merle Oberon didn't have long to wait for that free lance job. She had no more than said adieu to Samuel Goldwyn than Hal Wallis extended an invitation to her to star in "We Shall Meet Again." Today she is signing a contract for the original play planned for Bette Davis

Not only does Merle inherit Bette's picture, but her co-star, George Brent, and her director, Edmund Goulding. Eddie was worked with Merle in the past, so it's a happy reunion. He understands her and should do a great job. Giving Merle the Davis play is in no sense of the word an attempt to discipline last year's academy winner, but there are release dates to be met, and since Bette will not say when she is returning, the picture must necessarily go into production without further delay

DAILY STORY — The Peacemaker

ALTHOUGH unconsciously, I have been the third angle of a triangle in human relationships. I am not sorry, because my unwitting participation has resulted in drawing husband and wife closer together.

In fact, had they not found common cause in uniting against me, they were headed for the divorce court as sure as fate.

Both Mary and Jim had been my friends before their marriage. In fact, I introduced them.

Men have never been attracted to me, as lovers or future husband, but they have always come to me as a friend.

SO IT WAS NOT as a rival that I unknowingly came between Mary and Jim. Six months after their marriage I visited their home in another state.

I was shocked and alarmed to find there was a rift in their married happiness. They nagged at each other in my presence—or at least Mary did. Jim sat silent and grim beneath her innuendos and sharp-edged digs.

Her resentment seemed to be based on two things—that Jim didn't give her money enough to spend, and that he didn't take her out to parties and theaters in the evening.

That night, when Mary was called to a neighbor's for a few minutes, Jim reverted to his old custom and told me his troubles. There were tears in his eyes as he said, "I love the girl, darn it. I give her everything I can—this house, the furniture she wanted, a maid. But she runs up bills that I simply can't manage to pay. And I'm so tired at night that I only want peace and quiet in my own home—not dressing up in a stiff shirt and tearing out to parties and dances."

The next day, I had a talk with Mary. I didn't criticize her actions—simply told her that all of her friends hoped and expected she would make a go of marriage.

SHE FLARED UP immediately, "When I need justification for my marriage, I'll let you know," she said sharply.

When Jim took me to the station, I told him I felt Mary had been unjust to me. He resented my resentment.

So now they have straightened things out between themselves. But my role as peacemaker has left me out in the cold—and I'm lonely.

LISTEN, WORLD! By Elsie Robinson

THERE'S A little rug in my room. Not much to look at. Passing by, you might see only a bit of careless weaving. But, as you look at it more carefully, you're puzzled.

There's something about this strip of woven stuff that's unlike any rug you've ever known. The color, for instance. You'd thought at first that it was dull. But now you see it's full of rich, strong hues—scarlet, as brave as hope . . . and blue, like faith . . . and green that runs all through it like an April laugh . . . and scores of other tints, like brief, bright dreams.

And there's a pattern—some scattered bits of noble, old design. But they, too, come and go without a plan.

YOU'D LIKE to find the reason? It's not hard to find. THE ONE WHO WOVE WAS BLIND. This rug's not just a strip of woven wool, it's one man's life.

All day the weaver sat and shot his thread—bright gold and crimson, shuttling through the brown and gray. He had a chart and numbered pegs by which he found his way. So, day by day, through hope and failure, ecstasy and tears, he wove. And as he wove, he prayed. A simple prayer, I think . . . something like this:

"Dear Father, help me!
"Let there somehow be "The mark of beauty
"On this thing
"I cannot see!
"And if my fingers
"Fail your plan to find
"Forgive me, Father,
"For you know
"I'm blind!"

SO, I THINK, he prayed. And sometimes Beauty came. But sometimes, he grew bitter at it all . . . and the patterns would be marred

Yet, in the end—in spite of all the times when things went wrong, each blunder and stitch and broken tint was found to blend, like woven music, in one perfect song.

How do I know the prayer the weaver prayed? Because we too are weavers, you and I . . . and we too work in darkness all our lives. Blindly we take our seats before the loom . . . blindly we labor till our shift is done. And often turn away, heartsick—because the dream has gone astray. And yet—I think He knows how hard we try! I think His face is gentle when we cry—"OH FATHER, HELP US."

Hollywood Paragraphs

—By LOUELLA O. PARSONS—

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 12—So many readers have asked about Gloria Jean, the little eleven-year-old girl Joe Pasternak discovered and introduced in "The Underpup," that it is good news to hear from Joe that he has found just the right yarn for a follow up.

Gloria Jean is not only going to keep intact the movie family she acquired in her debut for "Happiness Ahead," but in addition to all the uncles she's getting herself a grown-up sister to add to the clan. Grover Jones is authoring the new yarn and Richard Wallace will again direct.

In the meantime, Pasternak is looking for an actress, a recognized one this time, to co-star with his protegee in the sister's role since she will carry the romantic honors.

Alan Marshal, who has been loaned out from studio to studio so often since he signed his Selznick contract he must feel like a Fuller Brush man, goes traveling again—this time to RKO. From what I hear about "Distant Fields," S. K. Laurens' story sounds like the best break young Marshal has had in some time.

Carmel White Engaged For Role Over Phone

At 18, Carmel White, patrician beauty of the Brock Pemberton production, "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," due at the Wilbur Monday evening, was playing toothless crones.

"I don't know why," says the 21-year-old Miss White, "but the moment casting directors saw me they'd begin dreaming me up to look five times my age.

"By one of those quirks, my voice is decades older than my face, a circumstance that has given me valuable training in reading lines. In recent radio engagements, I have been invariably cast as a kindly, old lady."

Happily for the chivalrous sex, Miss White is acting her age in the Clare Booth hit comedy next week.

"The funny thing about my getting the hostess role in 'Kiss the Boys Goodbye' was the way it happened. Friends had sent me to Mr. Pemberton's office several times. One day the phone rang at home an a masculine voice said, 'This is your boss speaking.' Having worked for George Abbott I thought it was he.

"As a matter of fact, I had read the Clare Booth comedy role for Mr. Pemberton months before and had been dismissed so casually I had thought the producer had even forgotten my name."

Miss White hopes to have happier memories of this engagement than those resulting from a previous Boston visit.

"The ill-guided management of this particular stock company decided it would be a wonderful idea to present Maxwell Anderson's 'Gods of Lightning' in Boston. They tried it, but Boston said no, the Sacco-Vanzetti case being still to vivid a recollection."

Born in Brooklyn and educated in a French convent, Miss White overcame the objections of her father, Hearst Publisher Tom White, and studied for a year at the Academy of Dramatic Arts. Following this, she played a season at the Pasadena Community Playhouse in California. Then followed the brief but terrifying stock company experience here.

Dramatic Epic On Twin Bills

An ageless action-drama and a comedy-romance reeking with youth and animal spirits share the Scollay and Modern screens today.

The one is Alexander Dumas' masterpiece, "The Man in the Iron Mask," with Louis Hayward in the dual role.

The modern comedy is "What a Life," film version of the sensational George Abbott stage hit. Jackie Cooper plays the well-intentioned but always-in-hot-water Henry Aldrich, who can't live down his father's Phi Beta Kappa.

'NURSE EDITH CAVELL' HAILED VITAL HISTORIC DOCUMENT

Excellent Acting By Entire Cast

"But this I would say, standing before God and eternity; I realize that patriotism isn't enough. I must have no hatred or bitterness toward any one."
—Nurse Edith Cavell.

By PEGGY DOYLE

It is these last words of Miss Cavell, bringing the picture to a conclusion, that set the note of "Nurse Edith Cavell," at Keith-Memorial.

It is this essentially sublime quality that gives such terrific timeliness to this drama of a quietly heroic woman "in times"—to use her own words—"when terror makes might seem right"—and "there is a higher duty than prudence."

Time and tide have provided a vastly different reception for Producer-Director Herbert Wilcox's second edition of "Cavell" than attended the release of its inevitably controversial silent predecessor.

This time there can be no question of propaganda. This reverent, dispassionate, factual tale of the tragedy of the British nurse whose only crime was assistance to war refugees to escape across the border transcends the propagandistic.

It is a stirring preachment against militarism. Just as the world today is anti-Nazi, not anti-German, so is "Nurse Edith Cavell" a protest not against Germany but against war and those who foment war.

The production is rarely distinguished and profoundly stirring. There is throughout the quiet that denies serenity and presages doom. The scene is Brussels. Nurse Cavell, invited by Belgium to modernize nursing science and methods of training, has become the head of Dr. Depage's surgical institute, where she had trained German nurses as well as French and Belgium.

That was in 1907. Seven years later, following a visit home to England, Miss Cavell returned to Belgium and converted the institute into a hospital for wounded soldiers, nursing and helping as many of the invaders' wounded as any other country's.

Her efforts to help British wounded to make their way toward the safety of Holland soon won the active assistance of the rich and influential Countess de Mavon, a bargee's wife and women relatives of the escaping soldiers. But after a year the German military command uncovered the part Miss Cavell and these other women were playing in releasing prisoners. She was arrested, tried and sentenced to death before a firing squad exactly 24 years ago today.

The story is told with the great

ANNA NEAGLE, noted British screen star, who plays with beautiful restraint the role of the heroic Edith Cavell in the film of that name now drawing crowds to the Keith Memorial.

est simplicity and regard for historical accuracy. First British production to be made in Hollywood, it is an artistic triumph for Wilcox, his British star, Miss Anna Neagle, in the title role, and the entire supporting cast of Hollywood players.

Miss Neagle's Edith Cavell is a masterpiece of restraint and inspirational power, notably in the prison scenes as she awaits inevitable execution. Edna May Oliver's French countess is an excellent performance.

Effective too, are Gilbert Emery, as the U. S. Ambassador Brand Whitlock, and H. B. Warner, as his fighting but frustrated aide, Hugh Gibson, who were brushed aside and ignored by German officialdom.

George Sanders, as a German captain an Lionel Royce, German commandant, are utterly convincing as ruthless officers immediately responsible for the death of the woman whose "crime" was her great humanitarianism. Competent performances are given by May Robson, Zasu Pitts, Halliwell Hobbes and others.

Its stark absence of dramatic embellishment and its faithful adherence to facts make "Nurse Edith Cavell" a vital historic document.

Hit for Bowdoin

Bowdoin Square's Saturday-through-Tuesday program will include "Lady of the Tropics," co-starring Hollywood's first glamour-boy and girl, Robert Taylor and Hedy Lamarr, and "Frontier Marshal," with Cesar Romero and Randolph Scott masquerading as a couple of deadshots.

'Stanley' Hit at Trans-Lux

Greatest assignment ever given a newspaperman is dramatized in Darryl F. Zanuck's "Stanley and Livingstone," with Spencer Tracy and Sir Cedric Hardwicke in the name roles. The picture opens today on Trans-Lux screen.

It was news that went 'round the world in 1871 when Dr. Livingstone, missionary-explorer, failed to return from darkest Africa. Assigned by his New York newspaper to "find Livingstone," Reporter Stanley risked even life itself only to bring back the story, one of the most dramatic that ever made a front page.

Importantly featured in the cast are Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Henry Hull, David Torrence, Walter Brennan, Charles Coburn and Henry Travers.

On the same bill, "Unexpected Father" features Mischa Auer, Dennis O'Keefe, Shirley Ross and, last but not least, Baby Sandy.

Downtown Ticket Sale for 'Abe Lincoln in Illinois'

There will be two box offices for the sale of seats for Raymond Massey, in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," opening a week from Monday at the Opera House.

In an effort to accommodate patrons, the Playwrights' Company has arranged to establish a downtown boxoffice at the Wilbur Theater. This will be in operation for the advance sale of seats and during the week that Robert E. Sherwood's Pulitzer Prize play is at the Boston Opera.

This means that there will be two boxoffices for the sale of tickets, as the regular advance and current sale will be at the Opera House as usual.

The advance sale at both the Opera House and at the Wilbur Theater will open Monday morning with seats for all six evening performances and for the Wednesday and Saturday matinees on sale.

30 Ousted May Get Jobs Back

If they can establish a record of faithfulness as employes, about 30 persons discharged from the offices of Sheriff John F. Dowd will have their jobs restored as a result of the Boston Bar Association probe, it was learned today.

At the same time, more than 20 employes of the Suffolk Superior Court for Civil Business were notified that their services would not be required after Nov. 1. Most of them are new employes.

Officials, however, moved to restore positions to old and trusted employes who were removed by John Patrick Connolly, former clerk of the court, who resigned under fire.

The bar association's investigating group today continued preparation of specifications of charges against Sheriff Dowd.

Financial Experts Keep Eye on Steel

When financial experts gather round the conference table to pass on the merits of recovery in so-called heavyweights of industry rate, and get, the closest attention . . .

IN CONSIDERING . . . The fine points of condition order book in the excellent gain recorded by are first examined . . . For pin activity, shown on the accompanying chart, steel was overshadowed cheeked production is a mockery if buying pulses are feeble . . . Thus it is the king of industrial heavyweights, steel, is subject to most careful diagnosis . . . As it cautiously recovers, many a boost and a knock is directed toward its order position . . . There are those who claim peace would ruddy dent its record . . . While others confident of its prowess, boast of the many points in its favor . . .

TO BEGIN WITH . . . The industry itself has taken careful stock of its own position . . . Prices have been handled from an ultra-conservative angle . . . And foolish booking avoided . . . We will find plenty of room left for upward revisions when needed . . . But peace will not exert a deflationary influence . . . As for orders they do not appear in danger of abrupt suspension . . . The surge of railroad buying is no over-night matter . . . The motor industry is moving forward on sound sales prospects . . . And the federal government is launching a preparedness program which is a potential long range stimulant . . . These are the three most active demand sources at present and until they lose vigor steel champion of heavyweight industry is secure.

WHILE STEEL . . . Accounts for much of the faith in the underlying soundness in recovery, it by no means monopolizes the stage . . . by automobile production . . . Which is just as well, since therein lie a promise of the orders needed to hold current operating levels . . . Of the other factors, cotton deliveries and bank debits both moved up smartly . . . Comparable 1937 figures have been exceeded in all directions and it is natural that observers look forward to a swifter "money flow," such as that good year provided during holiday months . . .

AN OLD ADAGE . . . Of the boardrooms is that holidays break long existing trends and stalemates . . . So we look forward to post-Columbus Day sessions in hopeful anticipation . . . An end to the futile pushing around of past weeks is promised . . . The balance between buying and selling orders is expected to end abruptly . . . Not because of the holiday hobit alone . . . But principally because any similar stalemate cannot last forever . . . Up or down is the question . . . And as we write this it is likely the answer hangs on the words Chamberlain speaks for war or peace.

Active Rally In Toronto Stock Market

TORONTO, Oct. 12 (AP)—Steel and aircraft stocks assumed the leadership in an advancing movement of the stock exchange in active trading.

Gold shares indulged in a mild upward flurry while the western oil and base metals stocks posted only minor changes in light turnovers.

A new mark was posted by National Steel Car at 70, up 1, and gains of 1 to 3 were boarded by the Canadian car issues, Dominion Coal Preferred, Dominion Foundries, Dominion Steel, Eastern Steel and Bathurst Steel. Fleet Aircraft recorded a gain of ¼ in active trading on top of yesterday's one point gain and trading in this issue was heavy. De Havilland added Massey Harris ruled higher.

Imperial Oil stood out in the senior oil issues with a gain of ⅛ to 17, and McColl preferred added more than one. Paper, food and utility shares posted more gains than losses.

Secondary gold stocks claimed the chief attention in the yellow metal list with better prices ruling for Little Long Lac, East Malartic, Arntfield, McLeod Prosnect, Preston and McKenzie. Gods Lake was strong and active at 15 cents, up 2, and Reno added 1.

International Nickel firmed a minor fraction and other base metals were steady. Chromium posted a small gain. In quiet action Home Oil weakened 3 cents and Anglo Canadian firmed 2. Davies traded at 51, unchanged.

Markets Closed

NEW YORK, Oct. 12 (AP)—Important security and commodity markets throughout the United States observed Columbus Day today. Closed for the holiday were the New York Stock Exchange, all local commodity futures markets, the Chicago Board of Trade and grain futures exchanges in other principal centers.

Jersey City and Chicago livestock markets were opened.

Trading in Canadian and foreign markets was conducted as usual, although the Buenos Aires Grain Exchange observed the holiday.

DULL TRADING IN FOREIGN MARKETS

LONDON, Oct. 12 (AP)—Inactive conditions prevailed in the stock market today pending Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech before the House of Commons, which came after the close of trading.

Yesterday's all-around improvement in prices was not fully maintained. Giltedged bonds were less active although the undertone remained satisfactory.

Firmness of giltedge issues again had a favorable effect on the market's industrial section, prices advancing under the lead of brewery and motor shares. Dealings are becoming increasingly easier in domestic rails, covered by a "gentlemen's minimum agreement."

Among foreign bonds, French, Japanese and Argentine issues were firm while German bonds were unaltered.

PARIS, Oct. 12 (AP)—Prices in the bourse weakened after a strong opening today. Contributing to the sell-off was lack of activity and uncertainty over immediate developments in the international field owing to tension between Russia and Finland. Some confusion was created by announcement of the British-Soviet barter agreement.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 12 (AP)—Bourse prices moved irregularly today in quiet trading. Peace rumors afected American shares adversely but domestic isues generally were firm.

Shipping shares were backward. Fokker aircraft was weak. The depressed American shares closed for the most part at the day's lowest levels and considerably below yesterday's parities.

Fee Power Is Extended

NEW YORK, Oct. 12 (AP)—Members of the New York Stock Exchange by a vote of 570 to 130, have approved an amendment to the constitution giving the board of governors power to prescribe minimum charges for miscellaneous brokerage house services, the Exchange announced.

The amendment gives the board power to prescribe minimum fees on inactive accounts, for safe-keeping of securities, etc.

Carloadings Show Small Increase

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 (AP)—The association of American railroads reported today 834,694 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ending last Saturday.

This was an increase of 54 cars compared with the preceding week; an increase of 132,078, or 18.8 percent, compared with a year ago.

PLAN NATIONWIDE BUSINESS SCHOOL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 (INS)—Secretary of Commerce Hopkins has called for a three-day conference the deans of several state universities business schools who, today, through Saturday, will confer with department officials here on means to develop nationwide centers of business research.

A major objective of the conference will be to revive a bill, sponsored by Hopkins several months ago, which would establish such business trends and forecasting centers, mainly for the aid of small business, in a number of state universities from coast to coast.

Hopkins strongly advocated the passage of the bill at the present session of Congress in search stations, conducted under Treasury educational direction, to provide continuous weather reports on basic centers, mainly for the aid of small business, in a number of state universities from coast to coast.

It was learned he may seek to revitalize the measure at the next session of Congress in January.

BLONDIE Maybe It's "Devil" Cake

by LESLIE FORD

SIGNING A HOTEL REGISTER is important, because the whole theory of Nevada divorce is built on the idea that six weeks' continuous residence gives the state court valid jurisdiction in a case. They're strict about it, because it's the only thing that gives any pretense of genuine legality to the divorce mill.

"All I mean is, Mr. Tucker knows I was in last night," Vicki Page, with this in mind, explained. "So it just happens this is once it isn't me that has to cover up. It's . . . somebody else."

Her full red lips curved in a curious little smile.

"For instance?" I inquired.

"Well, they say blackmail's nice work if you can get it."

Her slow smile deepened

"Wouldn't a lot of people like to know?"

She leaned forward.

"Has anybody ever told you a story, not mentioning names, but working out so you can put two and two together—"

She broke off abruptly, looking oddly at me again, and just sat there, staring at the floor.

"You don't seem to care a lot if Dex is dead," I said, after a while. It had been in my mind for some time, but I hadn't meant to say it. I was surprised hearing it come out.

Her face tightened.

"Sure, I care," she said. "But he's dead, so there's not much I can do about it, is there?"

LIKE LUNATIC ASYLUM

She got up abruptly, went over to the table, picked up a cigarette and stood there a long time with it hanging unlighted out of the corner of her mouth.

"Why do you think I'm not over at that joint checking hats?" she said quietly, without looking up. "Don't you suppose the minute Slim Maggio tells enough people confidentially to cover up, and it starts slopping over, everybody'll be on my neck trying to get the low down?"

Her voice rose hysterically.

"Do you think I want them all feeling sorry for me because he gave me the run-around? Don't you suppose I've got my pride, the same as Judy Bonner? I was crazy about him, sure—but that doesn't keep me from knowing he was no good."

"Oh dear, oh dear, oh dear!" I thought, "How I wish Judy would come!"

I thought I really couldn't sit there quietly another minute. But I did. Vicki was pacing the floor, back and forth, looking like a lion tamer in a cage, wailing over and over that she wished she was dead. I couldn't very well join her pacing, but I presently began to concur in her wish. "I can't," I thought, "stand this much longer without going mad."

And then came relief—or I mistakingly thought it was, not knowing Reno. Somebody knocked on the door. I called out, "Come in," and a girl I hadn't seen before walked in. She was well dressed, in ordinary street clothes, with a smart black crownless turban on her light hair, and a white tailored dress, and she carried a long green cigarette holder in her hand. She had a strange face, without animation of any kind.

"Where's Judy?" she asked dully, looking around the room.

"Out at the Bar B. W.," Vicki said.

"Oh."

The girl looked around again, and flopped down on the small of her back in a cushioned chair. She stuck her feet out in front of her.

"This is Mrs. Latham," Vicki said.

The girl nodded. She sat staring in front of her. Finally she said, "I wouldn't care if she just didn't read his letters in front of me every morning, and call him up when I'm taking a bath, so I have to hear everything she says to him. I don't mind the rest of it. But I don't think that's fair."

I glanced at Vicki. I had the curious feeling that it was visiting day at the lunatic asylum.

"Then what did you ever come out here with her in the first place, you big klunk?" Vicki said.

She collapsed on her stomach on the sofa, rolling her head back and forth in the down cushions, trying, I knew, to ease the ache in her own foggy brain. It was the first I saw of the strange Reno phenomenon that no matter how miserable and unhappy anybody is, she can always take time out to listen to anybody's else woes, and genuine too. I'm sure there's no other place in the world where there's so much disinterested emotion so freely given . . . or so much time wasted listening to broken tales of mismanaged lives.

"You might have known how it would be," Vicki said, without raising her head.

"I thought it wouldn't look so bad at home if everybody thought I was all for her marrying him," the girl said dully. "He works in a bank, and I didn't want anybody to think I was just being kicked out. He's swell, really. I didn't want it to be hard on him at the bank. And her husband's a nice guy too. He teaches in high school.

"He thought it would look better if we came out the same time—like nobody was getting hurt, just reshuffling the cards. And I don't care, really, I don't. It's just I wish she didn't read those long special delivery letters every morning while I'm trying to eat breakfast."

"Mrs. Latham," Colonel Primrose said slowly, and very soberly, "you and I are old friends, aren't we?"

WHERE IS JUDY?

She continued staring ahead of her.

"No," Vicki said. "It's hard enough to get down anyway."

"I'm glad there weren't any kids," the girl said. She lighted another cigarette from the end of the one in her holder, and looked around at me.

"Have you got any children?"

"Two," I said.

"With the father, I suppose."

She got up.

"Well, tell Judy I want her to come to our party tomorrow. We go to court at 11. You come too. I'm going to get so drunk I won't wake up till after she's married him—Down in the bar, at half-past eleven," she added.

She picked up her purse.

"I'm glad Judy and Dex are going to get married the same day she gets her decree. She won't have such an empty feeling, still having a man's name and it not meaning anything. That'll seem funny. Well, good-bye. I'll see you tomorrow."

She wandered out.

"I wish Judy would come!" I said.

I got up abruptly and went to the window. The snivelling tragedy of the girl who'd just strolled out, torturing herself to save the faces of a wretched bank clerk and a high school teacher in a small town somewhere back east seemed incredibly puny, and futile, and unreal, and brutal, as I raised my eyes to the vast luminous star-studded night.

Somewhere out under it was Judy, bearing a heart-breaking burden, worse than this one, and bearing it bravely. I opened my lips to breathe some sort of anguished prayer for her. No prayer came . . . only the old quatrain from Omar:

Oh that inverted Bowl we call the sky,
Whereunder, crawling, cooped, we live and die.
Lift not your hands to it for help,
For it as impotently rolls as you and I.

And just then there was a knock at the door. I turned back into the room. Vicki had raised her head and shouted "Come in!" And the door opened, and in came Col. Primrose.

He looked at me, then at Vicki, and the most extraordinary expression of relief came over his face. He rubbed his hands together, smiling.

Vicki got up instantly and retrieved her white hat. "I'll be going," she said airily. "See you later."

She turned at the door and gave Col. Primrose a slightly intoxicated smile, put on her hat, gave it a debonair pat that I knew she was far from feeling, and sauntered out.

Col. Primrose looked at me.

"That's Vicki," I said. "The hat check girl at the River House."

MISSING CLUES

"Oh," he said. His face clouded abruptly. "I thought it was your niece. I . . . also hoped it was."

For a moment I didn't understand. Then I thought of Vicki's full blue-black tresses, and came sharply back to the thing I'd wandered away from, listening to Vicki and the bank clerk's wife. My heart sank. Those bright hairs were still in the pocket of my riding shirt. I tried not to glance at my door.

I picked up a cigarette and lighted it, and sat down on the sofa to hide the fact that my knees were not steady.

"Well?" I asked.

He came over and stood in front of the sofa, looking down at me with troubled eyes.

"That's what I came to ask," he said.

"Really?"

He frowned impatiently.

"They've figured out that Cromwell was stabbed to death with a sharp instrument, early this morning," he said curtly. "They haven't found the weapon. But they've found a good deal about Cromwell—That he came to Reno with your niece, Miss Bonner, when she came out to get her divorce, for one thing."

I hadn't known that, but I didn't say so. I nodded, and said "So what?"

He looked at me soberly for a moment and went on.

"They have also learned that she was planning to marry him as soon as she got her decree."

I flicked my cigarette into the fireplace. "Clever of them," I said. "The papers have been full of it for days."

"Furthermore," he went on steadily, "that they've been quarrelling constantly—both in public and private—for a week. And that Mrs. Bonner was intensely jealous of his association with other women—with, I take it, considerable provocation."

He sat down beside me.

"Mrs. Latham," he said, "where is Mrs. Bonner?—I want to talk to her."

"I haven't the faintest idea, Colonel Primrose," I said, as casually and in as matter-of-fact tones as I could muster. "She went out riding at the Bar B. W. ranch as usual this afternoon, about three. I got in late, as you know, and I haven't seen her since I came. She probably went to dinner and to a movie, or dancing somewhere."

"Mrs. Latham," he said slowly, and very soberly, "you and I are old friends, aren't we?"

I nodded.

What will Judy do when she meets the Colonel? Don't miss tomorrow's thrilling chapter.

NO, SIR. I HAVEN'T ANY GOLDEN CIRCLE PINS LIKE THAT. SORRY. ANYTHING ELSE?
NOPE, I'M TRYING TO MATCH THIS ONE. GOODBYE.
NO, SIR, I HAVEN'T ANYTHING LIKE THAT IN STOCK.
Hmm—YOU'RE ABOUT THE FIFTIETH ONE WHO'D SAID THAT. I'M GETTING NOWHERE FAST.
SEE IF YOU CAN FIND OUT WHO SELLS THIS KIND OF GOLDEN CIRCLE PIN IN PARIS. I'LL PAY YOU FOR YOUR TROUBLE. BUT DON'T LOSE THE PIN!
COME BACK ABOUT FIVE O'CLOCK. I'LL SEE WHAT I CAN DO.
IF HE DOESN'T FIND OUT ANYTHING, I'M STYMIED. MAYBE THE PIN DOESN'T MEAN ANYTHING. MAYBE IT'S A FALSE CLUE. WELL--WE'LL SEE.

Sees Neutrality Repeal Dangerous

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN
(Special to Boston Evening American)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12—There would seem to be but one intelligent course for Congress to pursue at this moment of crisis in the destiny of a war-torn world.

It is apparent that enactment of the pending neutrality resolution into a new law, changing the existing neutrality policy first put into effect by the New Deal in 1935 would be not only unnecessary, but perhaps dangerous.

While there is a hope for an armistice and for peace, even though sporadic fighting may still occur, Congress should abandon the neutrality legislation, or postpone consideration of it.

A great many provocative things already have been said in Senate debate.

When the resolution comes before the House a great many more provocative and inflammatory things are going to be said if the measure is thrown into the pit for hot-headed debate.

Members of the House are even less subject to restraint of tongue than senators.

The position of the United States as a force for world peace could not be jeopardized by putting up.

Now, suppose the leaders insist upon their present course being pursued to the bitter end, and America repeals her New Deal mandatory embargo on arms at a moment when moves for peace are beginning to show signs of success.

That action alone might throw the fat right in the fire.

Repeal of the mandatory embargo on arms and munitions is clearly unneutral. Only those advocates of the course who have frankly declared it to be their purpose to aid England and France and strike a blow at Germany, have spoken in Senate debate in the air, with intellectual integrity.

Repeal of the arms embargo is unneutral.

And suppose, again, that Congress blindly goes ahead and amends the present neutrality law, and repeals the embargo. And suppose that shortly thereafter the warring nations of Europe compose their differences, and gather around the conference table.

In what position, then, would repeal of the embargo leave the United States?

At a moment when the true neutrality of America offers the best hope for the binding up of the wounds of war, how unfortunate might not such an unneutral act in her part prove to be!

Coach-Authors Ignore No. 1 Football Secret

IN ALL MY READINGS OF BOOKS AND articles wherein the successful football coaches reminisce, advise and moralize on how to win victories, including the latest work by Minnesota's Bernie Bierman, I feel that the old boys are not unpinning their hair. I have searched through those tomes in vain for some work on how the successful coach enlists his varsity recruits and by what means he induces the kids to take his shilling in preference to their other options.

AUSTEN LAKE

I though for a moment that Bernie had launched into a frank confession in his opening paragraph, which reports that someone asked Pop Warner, "the grand old patriarch" who was fired by Stanford and Temple, what makes a great coach great, and Pop replied, "Great material." But then Bernie waggles an editorial hip and slides off a typographical tackle into the clear with discussion of how to shield a punter and what happens when you don't box a tackle.

Now Bernie is one of the nation's great coaches. His Minnesota teams have ranked 1, 2, 3 in the country since Knute Rockne met his fate in an airplane crash and the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce began to skimp its support of Southern California. But then there are dozens of other football teachers round the land who are taking their biffings regularly, hearing the embittered yells of their alumni and bouncing from job to job, who would be great coaches too, if given the pick of school heroes from a region as big as New England. Bernie, at his worst, has the choice of more good football players than any other coach in the country. And yet did Bernie get licked last Saturday by a comparative corn-fed nonenity, Nebraska? He did!

Jones Hit Jackpot in California

THE TIME TO WRITE A FOOTBALL BOOK is when you are up. Because in the football business you may come down any day. Howard Jones sold a carload of books some years ago when Sou-Cal was burning up the West and the newspapers of the country were printing his daily remarks with ornamental borders. But he didn't write any books when he was coaching at Yale or at Iowa and getting his weekly trouncings, because the community boosters failed to take pride in flushing up shaggy schoolboy hulls in annual droves. So he moved from New Haven to Iowa City to Los Angeles, where his Sou-Cal teams began to mangle the opposition and pretty soon the Jones brand of magic was being recommended as the best there was and his writings were being studied by contemporary coaches for some suggestion of how to do likewise. But adversity set in when the local real estate boosters pulled out their financial plug and Howard's literary market leaked away. Technically, he is the same man with the same magic, but nobody studies his writings any more.

Also Pop Warner, one of football's original 49ers and inventor of the system which bears his name, has had his periods of failure when his material at Pitt, Stanford and Temple lost its manly bulge and hairy masculinity. At such times even Pop's wizardry couldn't make average kids do what athletes of his preferred size and agility had previously done with ease. Still the power of Pop's name is such that the shelves of every book store carry complete lines of his formulae and trade secrets and the coaches buy them and try to impart the prescribed system, wondering why it is that their boys still lose to West Rumpsteak U. on Dad's Day and turn up nothing better than a tie with Fishfry Tech.

No Book Contains a Cure

CONSIDERING THAT THE RECOGNIZED MASTERS of the game turn out star scholars who are pretty smart in the head and become coaches in their turn, it seems strange that when they try to impart the stuff in accordance with their teachings as they learned it from Old No. 1 himself, their teams somehow cannot tear it off successfully. Would you say that the answer in almost all cases is that they lack the same opportunity to lure male grizzlies and human kangaroos from the neighboring schoolboy jungles? With the same plays, methods and ABCs, their boys, being smaller of stature and slower of foot, are being tossed for lost yardage.

What I mean to say in a few thousand words is that no football book has ever offered a panacea for spindle shanks, hollow chest and a cigaret cough. The wisdom of the game's greatest authorities has never found a homeopathic cure for anemia and lack of wind and leg power. The straightest line is still the shortest distance between two points and the strongest back and stoutest limbs will be the first to get there.

The "Book of the Year"

SO, EXCEPT FOR THE LAYMAN, TECHNICAL football books and articles are a waste of ink and paper. Because it is the man and not the system, plus his facility for coaxing disciples which makes for big football success. For although Harvard retained the Haughton system long after P. D. went to his reward, a new athletic administration fumigated the premises and the prize kids of yesteryear somehow couldn't make the entrance grades or lacked the tuition cash and its teams, until Harlow began to flop conspicuously. And even Harlow, with one of the best football minds of his generation for detail, invention and knack with boys, has performed only minor miracles under the rigid system of admission which refuses to yoo-hoo to schoolboy sweethearts.

Soooooo, I am still searching for some big time college coach to let down his back hair and confess that the major portion of his success lies in the fungus knees, rye-bread shoulders and billygoat skulls of his kids.

That would, I suspect, make the book of the year.

Leahy Sends B. C. Against Florida

Coach Josh Cody had his University of Florida football team out bright and early at Fenway Park for a limbering up in preparation for their intersectional game with Boston College this afternoon.

ENGLISH DOWNS TRADE; ARTISANS BEAT DORCHESTER

NATIONAL LEAGUE FIELD, Oct. 12—English high's powerful eleven hung up its second straight win, rolling up a 26 to 7 score over a hapless Trade eleven in the opening game of a feature holiday double bill here this morning.

In the second encounter Mechanic Arts pushed across two touchdowns in the second half to top Dorchester, 13 to 0.

Close to 3000 schoolboy enthusiasts braved a chilly morning to see Bill Ohrenberger's smooth backfield run through Trade almost at will.

The touchdowns were made in the first three periods, two in the third, for the winners. The Traders registered their lone tally against the second-stringers in the last period.

Tom Brennan scored two, the first and last; Sarkis Malasian and Capt. Joe King added the others. Ed Healy, spare fullback, accounted for Trade's score.

English High-Trade

FIRST PERIOD

English High drew first scoring blood shortly after the kickoff, which Trade received. It came by way of a blocked kick deep in Trade's territory. Two plays later, English pushed across the touchdown.

A pass, Brennan to King, placed the oval on Trade's one and then Brennan crashed through for the tally. Sarkis Malasian place kicked the extra point.

Score—English 7, Trade 0.

SECOND PERIOD

Starting from their 47, the Double Blue went the remaining 53 yards for its second score. This also came by the aerial route.

Ehorgren and Brennan hugged the leather to the 25 where Brennan dropped back and hurled a pass to Malasian who caught it on the goal line. The try for extra point was wide.

Coach Ohrenberger then sent in his second team and Trade quickly rattled off two first downs before it was forced to kick.

THIRD PERIOD

Shortly after receiving the kickoff, English hung up touchdowns three and four. The first was on a pass from Tom Brennan on his 35 to Joe King, right end, who caught it on the 20 and scampered the remaining 20 for the tally. Malasian converted with a placement.

Sal Albondy set up the other when he returned the kickoff to Trade's 13. After making a first down on the 3, Brennan went over for the 26th point. English failed to make the extra point.

At this point, the double Blue's

LAWRENCE TRIPS LYNN ENGLISH FOE 8-0 IN TIGHT DUEL

MEMORIAL STADIUM, Lawrence, Oct. 12—Lynn English's hopes for a state championship were crushed here this afternoon as an underdog Lawrence eleven turned in a mild upset by defeating the invaders 8 to 0 in the feature game of the holiday program.

Both teams entered the contest undefeated, Lynn with three victories and Lawrence with the same record, plus a Worcester Commerce deadlock.

A long pass in the second period turned the tide. After battling on even terms in the first stanza, Lawrence worked the ball to the English 40. John Callaghy faded back to midfield, tossed an aerial to Capt. John Turner who leaped into the air on the 15 to run the remainder of the distance for the touchdown.

Coach Marp Deshaies' boys insured the victory in the final period after a Callaghy kick carried to the coffin corner, bounding dead on the Lynn 1. Captain Mack was sent into the end zone attempting to pass, but was brought down by Toomey, Lawrence center, before he could get the ball away.

Mike Chattadonna was the outstanding Lynn player. His hard running kept the Lawrence fans on their feet the greater part of the game, but even this lad could not fire the English offensive within the Merrimac Valley team's 18 yard line.

Plays Without Helmet Dies After Practice

FAIRFAX, Okla., Oct. 12 (AP)—Frank Hamon, 13, complained his head hurt after he ran into Coach Lynn Yarborough at football practice without a helmet. He continued.

Later he died in a Fairfax hospital.

CODMANS TACKLE MORRIS

Dorchester Town Field will be the site of the feature attraction of next Sunday's schedule of Boston Park League grid clashes when the Scarlet and White Club will be host to the Mattapan Merchants.

The Merchants share first place in the East division of the circuit with the Codman A. A., both with two wins in as many starts, while the Scarlets won their opener but paired in the scoreless tie with the Geraghty Club last Sunday at Fens.

Codmans are at home at Robert's Field to the Morris Club while the twice-defeated Chippewas return to South Boston Stadium to make another victory bid against the Monroe Club whom the Codmans trampled last week.

Geraghy Club plays again at Fens Stadium with the O'Connell Club; St. Alphonsus A. A. opens the West division against the Center Club at Savin Hill Playground.

Gate of Heaven opened with a tie last week and their guests for this Sunday at Lee Playground in South Boston will be the high-scoring St. Lazarus Club from East Boston.

Charlestown Town Team and St. John's of Roxbury get together in the windup at Barry Park, Bunker Hill.

Lions Ask Waivers On Halfback Brill

DETROIT, Oct. 12 (AP)—Coach Elmer Henderson of the Detroit Lions of the National Professional Football League announced today he had asked waivers on Harold Brill, young halfback.

Brill, who played for the University of Wichita in 1938, is being replaced by Kent Ryan, former Utah State star who was with the Lions last year.

Wellesley Tops Natick, 20-0

NATICK, Oct. 12—A snappy Wellesley High football team trounced Natick High here today to the tune of 20 to 0.

Meryll Frost, a Natick boy who pays tuition to go to Wellesley High, led the victors to their three-touchdown margin by flashy running and his perfect passing. He tallied once himself and later threw a pass to Bob McLeod for the second score.

Late in the third period Jim Sullivan, Wellesley fullback, intercepted a Natick aerial on his 9-yard stripe and raced the length of the field to register the final count.

Belmont Victor, Lineman Hurt

Scoring in every period but the second, a powerful Cambridge Latin team downed Belmont High 19 to 0 at Belmont Athletic Field this morning.

Quarterback-Capt. John Randall counted three times for Latin, climaxing three sustained drives from midfield. Randall also booted the only extra point scored.

Charlie Plante, Belmont right tackle, was hurt in a pile-up in the third period and was taken to Cambridge City Hospital with a possible concussion of the brain.

Army Squad In Fine Fettle

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 12 (AP)—Army's football forces seemed ready for the best game of the season Saturday when they move into Baker Field against Columbia's Lions.

In a spirited drill, the varsity looked as impressive as at any time this year with Bill Gillis and Jim Rooney starring on pass defense.

FOURTH PERIOD

The second stringers held Trade the early part of this canto, but a blocked kick on English's 20, recovered on the 18, paved the way for Trade's only score.

Leary heaved Grinnell a pass which was caught on the three. On the following play Ed Healy scored through right guard. He also carried across the extra point.

Final score: English 26, Trade 7.

Mechanic Arts vs. Dorchester

FIRST PERIOD

Jerry Cowhig received Dorchester's kickoff on his 25 and returned it to the 40. After making a first down at midfield, Cowhig punted.

Although play was centered in Dorchester's territory throughout this period, no threats were made until the closing moments.

John Yonaker, end, partly blocked Mason's kick on the 32 for Mechanics. On the first play, Cowhig brought it to the 22 and then heaved a pass to Yonaker on the eight. Then the period ended.

Score—Mechanic Arts 0, Dorchester 0.

SECOND PERIOD

Dorchester held on the next three downs and took possession of the ball on its 3. Charlie Mason then punted from behind his goalline to the 30.

The Artisans came back again just before the stanza ended. Taking to the air with Jerry Cowhig tossing and elongated Yonaker catching, they marched from midfield to their opponent's 12.

Here, the passing combination clicked for an apparent touchdown, but it was nullified by a penalty, just before the whistle blew.

THIRD PERIOD

After being held back in their territory for most of this period, with Dorchester nearly scoring, the Artisans finally came to life and scored the first touchdown. It came via the aerial route.

Jerry Cowhig tossed a pass from his 35 to John Yonakor on the 29.

Yonakor grabbed the ball just as Henry Aleo, safety man, was about to knock it down and went the rest of the way for the score.

Cowhig place-kicked the extra point.

FOURTH PERIOD

Dorchester managed to hold "The Little Boys in Blue" during the early stages of this last period but a few minutes before the game came to a close, Jerry Cowhig swept around his right end for the final point.

His kick for the extra point was blocked.

Final score—Mechanic Arts 13, Dorchester 0.

DeGregory Star As St. Clement's Trips Mission

Sparked by John DeGregory, St. Clement's high defeated Mission Church high, 13 to 0, at Fens Stadium this morning.

Scoring in the second and fourth periods, St. Clement's played steady ball and held the upper hand from the start of the second quarter, when Barry, St. Clement's left tackle, pounced on a Mission fumble on the home team's 15. DeGregory scored standing up. Try for the point failed.

Late in the fourth period the visitors took the ball on downs inside enemy territory. On the first play DeGregory weaved over for the second touchdown. Conway kicked the point.

The game ended with the ball in St. Clement's possession on Mission's 15.

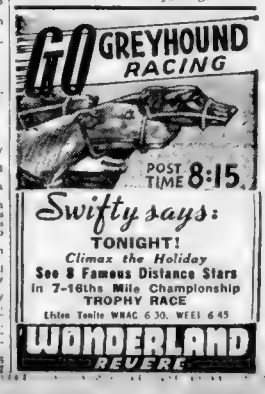
Whiteman Back With Eli Squad

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Oct. 12 (AP)—Yale's varsity football team engaged the jayvees in a lengthy scrimmage, which was featured by the return to action of Hal Whiteman, regular halfback, who had been out with an arm injury.

Indications were that Whiteman would be ready by Saturday in time to face the University of Pennsylvania eleven in the Bowl. Fred Burr's passing and Sophomore Hovey Seymour's running were highlights of the contact drill.

Navy Soccer Team Bites Dust

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 12 (AP)—Gettysburg College's soccer team spilled the Navy 2-1 at the start of the naval academy's season. Howard and Fred Mizell each scored once for Gettysburg.



Hartnett, Dean on Hot Seat

CHICAGO, Oct. 12 (INS)—Philip K. Wrigley, owner of the Chicago Cubs, admitted he had not made up his mind whether Charles Leo ("Gabby") Hartnett would be signed again as manager next year.

Gabby Hartnett

Dizzy Dean, bought for $185,000, sore arm and all, is another player whose tenure is believed to be uncertain, at least at the $20,000 salary he is reported to have drawn for the last two years.

Wrigley said he had been disappointed with the Cubs this season, not particularly because they wound up in fourth place, but because of the way they played.

"Save for occasional spells," he said, "they don't look like a real team. They don't seem to operate as a unit, with one goal and one determination."

Wrigley conceded Hartnett might not have had enough authority, saying:

"A lot of people want to know if we're going to fire Gabby as manager. Perhaps the answer might be to give him more authority.

"I'm so annoyed and upset over the way our team looked against the White Sox (the Sox beat the Cubs 7 to 1 in the seventh and deciding game of the City Series) that I don't even want to discuss the matter now. I prefer to wait for a few weeks till I can think it over with more calm and detachment."

DIZZY DEAN

Persons acquainted with Cub affairs said Dean will have to prove he can pitch before he is signed again next year.

Eaglets, H. P. Grid Victors

Hyde Park High scored it's first grid victory of the season when they whipped Charlestown 7 to 0 at National League Field. Boston College High was the other victor, scoring a 21 to 0 victory over Roslindale in the other half of the twin bill.

The plucky Charlestown team held Skip Sherlock's charge even for two periods but successive thrusts through the line coupled with a flock of completed forwards with Higgins and Larsado featuring, routed the Bunker Hill boys in the third period.

Completely outplayed during the first half and repeatedly on the retreat, Skip Sherlock's Parkians took to the air in the third period to turn in their first win of the year. Starting from their 35, with Leo Higgins tossing rifle passes to Bobby Anderson, left end, they quickly advanced the pigskin within the shadows of the Bunker Hill goal.

Frank Losordo, fullback, knifed his way through the center of the line from the one. Higgins added the extra point on a double reverse around left end.

Higgins' booting and passing was largely responsible for the win and keeping Charleston from scoring.

The Eaglets had no trouble in rolling up three touchdowns to nothing for Roslindale. Bob Mason put his mates ahead in the first period when he caught a Ronayne pass on the 15 and went over standing up.

"Red" Sliney added the conversion with an end run.

Sliney added the second six points in the third stanza.

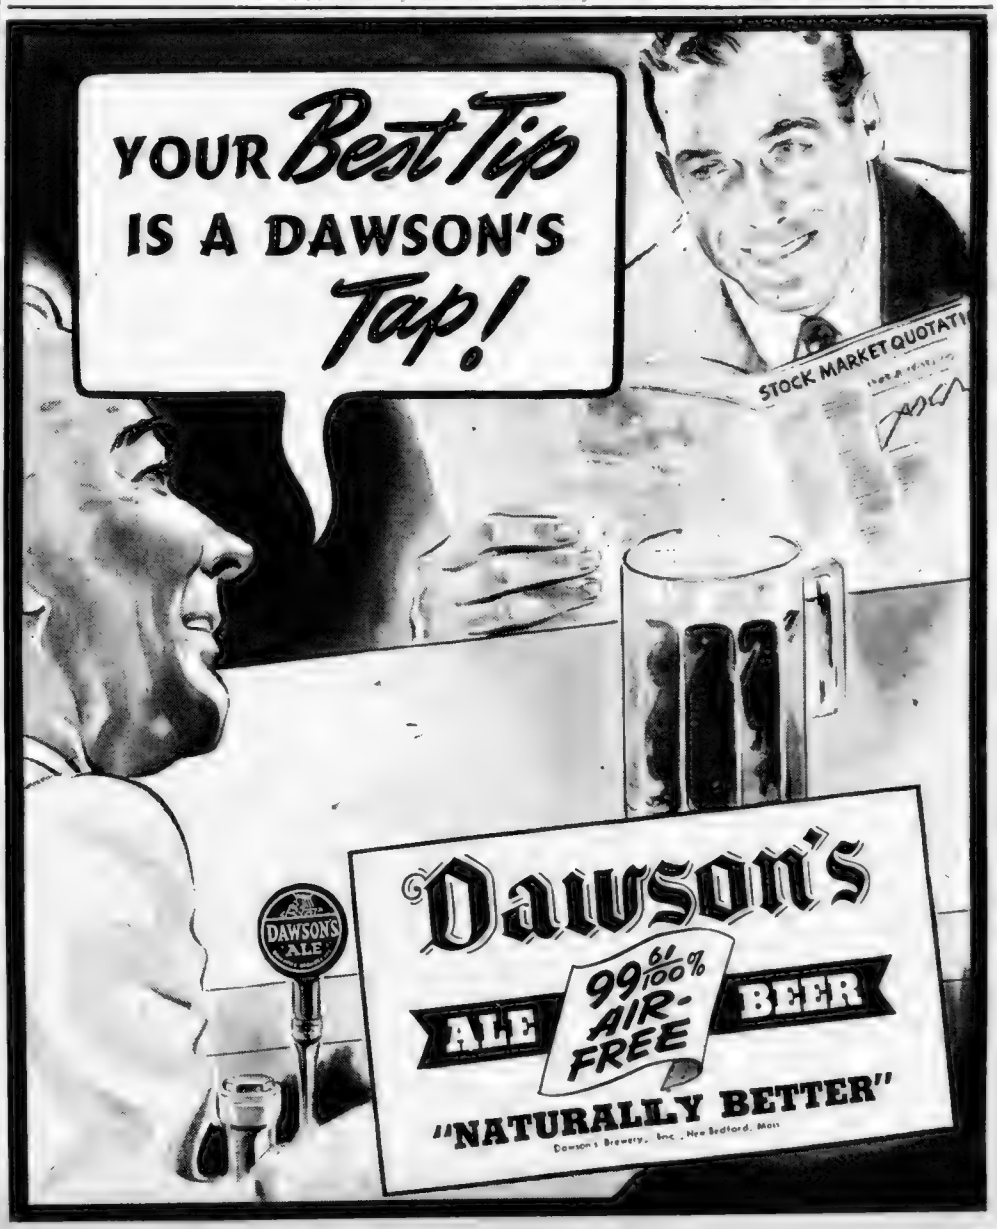
Dodgers Cut 6 Gridders From Roster

NEW YORK, Oct. 12 (INS)—Six players were released by the Brooklyn football Dodgers in a drastic shake up following the rout by the Redskins at Washington Sunday and it was hinted that more releases are about to bolster the squad.

Those released were Bud Reisig and George Lott, ends; Gus Zarras and Ed Mc ... guards and Stan Kosel and Jim Ne... backs. All except Lott are veterans of one or more seasons of play in the National League.

"We've discovered certain men either don't have the ability or don't fit into our style of play," Coach Potsy Clark said. "The Dodgers don't intend to take any more lickings like the one in Washington."

Dean for replacements may involve ... Dodgers Hector, as the club is in the western division of the league and can't play with Fairfield Tabor. Andy Lotshaw, former Detroit Tigers trainer, may be called up from the Dodgers farm team in Union City, N. J.



Vander Eb Near Blows With Ribbentrop's Son

STAR HARVARD BACK TELLS OF CONDITIONS IN NAZI GERMANY

By DAVE GLUECK

Henry Vander Eb, blocking back on the Harvard team, spent his senior preparatory year as an exchange student in a Nazi military school, where he roomed with foreign minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop's son.

"Hank," who has been a'ternat-ing with Frazier Curtiss at the heavy duty post on B team tells of some interesting experiences in the National Political Education Institution located in the South Hartz mountains.

"Rudi" Ribbentrop and Vander Eb slept in the same room at the academy. Every night, discussion turned to the relative merits of Germany and America, with the young Nazi citing the virtues of National Socialism, and deploring conditions in the United States. He would sneer at a "so called Democracy where 5 per cent of the nation controled the wealth, and ten million people starved for want of jobs."

One night Vander Eb got angry at the Nazi's slanders, and asked him where "that fat sow Goering got his seven Polish hunting lodges." Ribbentrop flew into a rage, and threatened to throw the American boy out of the room, but says the 190 pound footballer with a smile, "nothing ever came of it."

Subsequently the two boys got over their mad and "Hank" visited the foreign minister's home and talked with him. Among other things he noticed that the Ribbentrops drove around in two big Mercedes, and in spite of the German food shortage, their table was always set with plenty of meat, butter and eggs, things that good Nazis are supposed to use sparingly.

ONE STEW DAY

Every second Sunday of the month is ein topf (one pot day) when people are required to eat only a vegetable stew and contribute the money which would otherwise have been spent on their meal to the winter relief fund.

Vander Eb declares that only the poorer citizen abided by the law. Nazi officials, such as Ribbentrop never stinted their diets for the sake of relief.

After the Austrian Anschluss, when Hitler returned in triumph to Berlin, "Hank" and his school mates were in the guard of honor opposite the Reichs Kanzlei. The American youth refused to give "Heil" to the "Fuerher" in spite of hard looks and muttered threats by surrounding Storm Troopers.

Shortly after this Vander Eb left school for a walking trip down the Rhine and then returned to the United States.

The big Harlow hopeful who is of Dutch, not Germany ancestry still gets occasional letters from "Rudi" Ribbentrop. His best German friend, is now in the Nazi navy, although "Hank" says he "almost pursuaded him not to join."

Vander Eb was moved from end to blocking back this week, where his pass receiving and punting abilities will be used to better advantage. The Crimson cracker has developed slowly this year because of his absence from the game, during his stay abroad. Previously, he had played at Loomis school.

CRIMSONS LEAVE TODAY

Harvard has just about completed preparations for the trip to Chicago. They will practice this morning, and leave from the South Station on the Wolverine at 3 50.

HENRY VANDER EB
As German Student

Bart Kelly has replaced Jim Devine at right end in the starting line up, thus climaxing a three year attempt to fill the shoes that belonged to his brother Shaun, former Crimson captain, and one of the few men who ever broke a steel blocking machine.

Capt Torby Macdonald is ready to start, according to the doctors, but it is doubtful if he will see much service against the Wind-City setups. The speedy fullback has lost one of his cushion days during his sickness, scheduled to be held by a leg injury, but he can untuck up in the week before the Penn game when Harlow expects to have the squad at full strength for the first time this season.

"Ox" Joe Gardella is ready for another go at one week he meets the air-minded Chicagoans at Stagg Field. The starting lineup will be: Le, MacKinnon; lt, Miller; lg, Lowry; c, Aries; rg, Sergent; rt, Hedges; re, Kelly; qb, Coleman; lhb, Lee; rhb, Gardella; fb, Spreyer.

Reds Grand Club, Says McCarthy

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 12 (AP) — Joe McCarthy, manager of the New York Yankees, returned to his Buffalo home for a "couple of days of pheasant shooting."

Referring to the Yankees latest victory, he explained:

"The Reds didn't collapse. They had a grand club. Any team that can win 97 games in the national loop has to have plenty on the apple. It so happened that our boys were really hot for the series."

GOVERNOR TO ATTEND HORSE SHOW OPENING

Two hundred show horses of royal breeding, drawn from throughout New England, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania launch their bid for the trophies and rich purses put up by the 12th annual Boston Horse Show, when Gov. Leverett Saltonstall officially opens the 110th Cavalry classic this evening at 7:30 in gaily-decorated Commonwealth Armory.

The governor will give the signal for the show to commence its four-day run, with a presentation of 64 events in a series of six sessions, from the box of Col. Philip L. Brown, show chairman, and Mrs. Brown. Other guests in the gubernatorial box will be Gen. Daniel Needham and Gen. Roger W. Eckfeldt, with their ladies.

Arthur H. Lovesy, show secretary and ringcaster for close to half a century, will blow his bugle, and the show will be on with the police saddle ponies answering the call.

Twelve events comprise the "Governor's Night" program, with the most colorful feature being the exhibition drill and prize competition of the Boston Mounted Police, in command of Sergeant William B. Dooley. The pudging will be more rigorous than ever, as a record-breaking collection of five trophies are to be passed out among the bluecoats. The trophies include the Hotel Kenmore, Sears Roebuck and Fox and Hounds awards.

Veteran 'Pures' Return to Ring

Amateur boxing will hit its real stride next week.

In the third of the Golden Gloves bouts tonight at the Arena, many veterans of the 1938 wars will return to action.

Forty-nine entries, among these is Howard Dunderdale, Allston, who last year won the Hearst New England all America championship. One year older, Howard figures he will win national honors this year.

H. Dunderdale

Other entries already received for next Monday night's show are Robert Halliday, Newport, R. I., 118 pounds; Arthur Samara, Woburn, 126 pounds; Win Hector, Boston, 135 pounds; and Fred Earle, Bournow, hard hitting middleweight.

Last Monday saw the Rhode Island delegation sweep honors, especially in the light heavyweight class, in which Pete Gonsalves knocked out Pat Devine, New England light heavyweight champion.

With the return of Dunderdale and other local fisticuffers, honors may return to the Bay State next Monday.

JEAN PUSIE SHIPPED TO COAST

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 12 (AP)—Jean Baptiste Pusie, defense man for the St. Louis Flyers last season and stormy petrel of hockey for several seasons, was traded to the Vancouver Lions of the Pacific Coast League for Jimmy Arnott.

Ed Steffen, president of the St. Louis American Hockey Ass'n club, said Arnott was "one of the leading defense men of the Pacific Coast." Arnott has played with the New York Rangers, and with the Springfield, Mass., Windsor and Quebec clubs.

The transfer of Pusie—whose escapades during the 1938-39 season drew fines and suspensions several times—had been expected for some-time, since the Flyers made no effort to have the French-Canadian reinstated at the recent meeting of the association in Chicago. He had been under suspension for an attack on an official in the league play-offs against Tulsa last March.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 12 (AP)—The Cleveland Barons of the International-American Hockey League announced to sale of Bill Beveridge, goalie, to the Syracuse Stars of the same league.

Mr. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

ONE WILL GET the answer as to how good a football team Dartmouth has this year when the "Big Green" clashes with Navy on Saturday.

Dartmouth had one of the most powerful football teams in the country last season. Bob McLeod was named as a member of the Hearst All-America eleven, and received similar rankinig in most of the mythical all-star teams. McLeod was supported by crack players in every department.

McLeod and Bill Osmanski, former Holy Cross gridiron hero, are now winning football games for the Chicago Bears. At Hanover, however, football is as usual with an abundance of exceptionally fine material, and the old Dartmouth spirit that usually forces the breaks in the close games.

The Navy has a strong team this Fall, and in the opinion of Bill Grimes, will win. Bill is a Dartmouth man, and for this reason he may be over-rating the opposition. In football, college people always build the opposition to the very skies. This system was instilled in them when they attended college. The average college football coach seldom gives his own team credit for having anything other than nice looking uniforms. The coach will then discuss at length the merits of the rival eleven.

This is an excellent way to keep youngsters from getting overconfident. It also builds up an alibi for the coach in the event of defeat.

I do not agree with Grimes when he says the Navy will beat Dartmouth. I believe there is enough left of the 1938 Dartmouth eleven to win from the Middies.

Dartmouth will come to the Stadium on October 28 for a game with Harvard. In recent years, the "Big Green" has been rather rough on Dick Harlow's charges, and I know that the Crimson coach is preparing a warm reception for the Indians from the North.

As part of its preparation for Dartmouth, Harvard will try some new open plays against the University of Chicago on Saturday. A week from Saturday the Crimson will receive a severe test from the University of Pennsylvania. The Penn eleven will be in New Haven this week to oppose Yale. On the sensational showing Yale made against Columbia last Saturday, Pennsylvania will get beaten.

On paper, it looks as if most of Saturday's major contests will run to form, but after what happened to Holy Cross and Fordham last Saturday, one cannot forecast the result of college football games with any too much certainty. The forward passing game has changed everything in the gridiron pastime.

Boston Y. M. C. A. Has Boxing Team

THE BOSTON Y. M. C. A. will have a boxing team this season. Following a series of tryout matches, the following members have been named for the team: Maynard Smith and Vincent Doyle, 118 pounds; Wally Linquist and Joe Carver, 126 pounds; George Sherman and Harry Brooks, 135 pounds; Capt. Frank Galvin and Joe Candellero, 147 pounds; Tom Finneran and Frank Murphy, 160 pounds; Chester Wallen and John Reardon, 175 pounds. Joe Carroll is managing the team and would like to match it against college, club and other "Y" outfits.

I would suggest to Joe that he enter his team in the Hearst All-America amateur boxing tournament that opens at the Arena early next month. The class of the New England amateur boxers have been invited to compete in the All-America show, and I know that the Boston Y. M. C. A. team would make a creditable showing.

The winners in the trial bouts of the All-America tourney at the Arena will take part in the New England finals at the Garden on December 11. The survivors in the New England finals will then sweep into action in the All-Eastern finals which will be conducted at the Garden on December 18.

Victors in the All-Eastern bouts will journey to San Francisco to battle in the grand nationals which will be held the latter part of January or early in February.

Huskies Plan Air Attack

It must have been strange for the Northeastern grid squad to see daylight in their holiday workout early this morning.

Due to late classes, the Huskies never get started until dark and as a result the boys work under lights every night. But, with classes suspended today Coach Jimmy Dunn took advantage of the break and ordered a morning session.

Work was devoted almost entirely to passing with Bob Gurney and Sonny Yetten doing the throwing. Bates showed a marked pass defense weakness against Harvard last week and the Huskies are going to test the Bobcats through the air next Saturday.

Against Harvard, Bates used a seven man line most of the afternoon and the Crimson could have passed all afternoon. The Harlowmen, however, only threw three aerials. One was completed and the other two were dropped by eligible receivers in the clear.

Zuppke Claims Squad 'Looks Sad'

TUCSON, Ariz., Oct. 12 (AP)—Coach Bob Zuppke sent his 35 University of Illinois gridders through two drills under a warm Arizona sun and remarked afterward they looked pretty sad.

Zuppke, describing his team as an "unknown quantity," said he plans to start five sophomores against the Southern California Trojans in Los Angeles Saturday.

GENE KELLEY TAKES E. BOSTON 10-MILER

Gene Kelley, young plodder from the Newton Y. M. C. A., won the first annual handicap road race of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel H. N. S. today over a 10-mile East Boston course which started and finished at Maverick sq.

Kelley won by only a few feet vore the flying Lou Gregory of Millrose A. A., and right on Gregory's heels were Maurice Carbonneau of Lynn and Salvatore Solimine of St. Leonard's H. N. S., North End.

Tarzan Brown, B. A. A. Marathon record holder, was unable to thread his way through the packed field and wound up in 10th position, while Leslie Pawson, former B. A. A. Marathon record holder, could do no better than 12th.

Johnny Kelley, another former marathon winner, dropped out in second mile complaining of sickness.

The race was marred somewhat only by the numerous cars which frequently got in the way of the runners. In fact, if it were not for the heavy traffic, Salvatore Solimine might well have been the winner.

The stocky North Ender was in the forefront of the running for eight miles when the cortege and gas fumed slowed him down, and he did well to finish as far up as he did.

Lou Gregory of New York, who won the time prize, ran a remarkable race after riding all night to get here in time to start.

Many prizes were awarded, including one to the first East Boston boy to finish, won by Francis Curto, who was far back in 39th position, and a prize to the first Italian boy to finish, won by the aforementioned Solimine.

The team prize was won by the North Medford club.

New Backfield For Purple

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 12 (AP)—Holy Cross topped off its preparations for Saturday's game with Georgia at Athens by scrimmaging for the third straight afternoon.

With three of the team's four regular backs, Ronnie Cahill, Henry Giardi and Jack Kelley, still on the injured list, Coach Joe Sheeketski devoted most of the time to his new ball-carrying combination of Whelan, Nahigian, Osmanski and Gerasimas.

Jack Reardon, veteran end, is another regular who is unlikely to see action against Georgia.

The Holy Cross squad of 33 players entrained today for Athens, Ga.

Hingham Blanks Abington, 12-0

HINGHAM, Oct. 12—Hingham High blanked visiting Abington 12 to 0 here this morning, scoring in the second and last quarters.

John Allegra, Hingham right half, spearheaded the victors' attack and punched over both markers after long marches from deep in his own territory. Both scores were pushed through the line from inside the ten-yard stripe.

Tufts Gridmen Work on Holiday

Columbus Day proved to be no holiday for the Tufts gridmen, for they went through a two-hour scrimmage today at the Tufts Oval, building a defense against Amherst plays.

Facing the Lord Jeffs at Amherst on Saturday, Coach Lew Manly has decided his weakness is against forward passes, and the varsity spent all yesterday and today in trapping aerials

Duke-Pitt Struggle Tops Week-end Card

By LAWTON CARVER
International News Service Sports Editor

One of the heaviest intersectional football programs to be served this early in the season in years will be offered on the coming week-end.

One of the most intriguing battles will be a resumption of hostilities between Duke's Blue Devils and the Pitt Panthers at Pittsburgh. Out of last year's encounter between these two Pitt emerged with a 7-to-0 defeat and Duke with a bid to the Rose Bowl. Both are powerful again; both are willing and both unbeaten.

Next to that feature one of the major attractions on a slate that includes more than a dozen top-flight encounters between elevens from different sctors will be Fordham's clash with Tulane at New Orleans, followed by such fracases as Georgia vs. Holy Cross at Athens, Ga., New York University vs. North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N. C., Notre Dame vs. Southern Methodist University at South Bend and Marquette vs. Michigan State at East Lansing.

Of them all, however, the Pitt-Duke struggle is No. 1 for purposes of getting a line on just what these two powerhouses of last season have this time and on how the national championship picture may stack up when the finish arrives six weeks hence.

Pitt has pushed over Washington and West Virginia and Duke virtually won as it pleased from Davidson and Colgate.

Since last season Duke has lost Eric Tipton and Dan Hill, two of the mightiest men on the gridiron in their time, while Pitt has been shorn of the services of Goldberg, Stebbins, Chickerneo and Coach Jock Sutherland and, moreover, is supposed to be in the throes of deemphasis.

Duke, therefore, is favored by many—but it may be extremely tough.

Fordham, as usual, seems to have a "promising team," but already has been beaten once—by Alabama—and may be running into more of the same. Tulane is rated about even with Tennessee in the South which means No. 1 down there and perhaps the same in the entire nation. So far, the Green Wave has rolled over Clemson and Auburn by close scores.

Notre Dame, with victories over Purdue and Georgia Tech to get its offense clicking, is expected to keep its slate clean against S. M. U., which has been beaten by none other than Oklahoma which also trimmed mighty Northwestern.

Other intersectional tussles worthy of note include Boston University-Western Reserve, Carnegie Tech-Case, Catholic University-Detroit, Chicago-Harvard, Colorado-Kansas State, Southern California-Illinois, Rutgers-Richmond, Temple-Texas Christian, Villanova-Texas A. and M.

ARMY PLEBES WIN

WEST POINT, Oct. 12 (AP)—The Army Plebe football team defeated the Bucknell University Freshmen here, 13 to 6. Army scored twice the first half, Bucknell scoring late in the fourth quarter, when Thomas caught a long pass on the goal line.

Hal Le Roy Consults Foremost Hair Specialist

BOSTON, Oct. 11 (J.W.)—Hal Le Roy, famous dancer now appearing in "Too Many Girls"—at the Shubert, knows that his hair is vital to his good appearance. He consults and takes treatments from John E. Warner, as many other celebrities have. Says Mr. Le Roy: "After taking your treatments I know that your advice on the hair and scalp and your form of treatments is really tops." Most men do not realize that 85% of all baldness is due to local scalp conditions which can be checked and corrected by Warner treatment if caught in time. Once you are bald it is too late to do anything and the time to save your hair is while you still have hair to save. There is no charge or obligation for a private consultation and examination at the offices of John E. Warner. His offices are conveniently located at $15 Washington St., opposite R. H. White's, near the corner of West St. Hours 10 a. m. to 8 p. m. daily. Saturday to 6 p. m. There is a separate department for women. Fees for treatment are moderate. Advt.

Meyer May Get Gabby's Job

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 12 (AP)—Rumora in baseball circles today said Bill Meyer, who piloted the Kansas City Blues to an American Association championship, might be named manager of the Chicago Cubs should P. K. Wrigley decide to replace Gabby Hartnett.

In 1938, Meyer steered the Blues to the little world series victory.

Race Starter Killed at Laurel

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 12 (AP)—Ceilhus F. Dusak, an assistant starter, fell under a starting gate just after the fourth race and was crushed to death in view of thousands of fans.

The wheel passed over his head and Dusak of Brooklyn, N. Y., was dead when he arrived at a hospital. Track officials said it was the first accident of its kind they could recall since the gates were introduced on Maryland tracks several years ago.

HANLEY SHUFFLES B. U. FORWARD WALL FOR WESTERN TEAM

In order to cope with the powerful Western Reserve attack, Coach Pat Hanley has readjusted his entire Boston University forward wall for next Saturday's Fenway Park battle and will not have a single sophomore in the line.

He has moved Joe Lanata, a veteran end, who has been a reserve on the right side, to regular left wing, replacing Cliff Fitzpatric, a sophomore. Ray Valas, newcomer, who started at left tackle last Saturday, will give up his job to Joe Giannotti, a 206-pound senior who has been a letterman for the past two years.

These changes give the Terriers Joe Lanata and Jim McDonald at the ends, Capt. Paul Sullivan and Joe Giannotti at the tackles, Ray Hartley and Charlie Cremens at the guards with Ray Needham at center.

All seven are experienced lettermen with Sullivan, Needham and Giannotti being seniors.

2 SOPHS IN BACKFIELD

Pat Hanley's particular concern over having a veteran line is due largely to the fact that he will be starting three sophomores in the backfield against the Red Cats. Charlie Thomas and Johnny Wedemeyer at the halfbacks, together with Walter Williams at fullback, will be playing their first college game as regulars this week-end.

Johnny Connearney, blocking quarterback, is the only letterman starting in the backfield.

These backfield shifts have been made to see if the Terriers' running attack can be improved. Last week against Franklin and Marshall, the Scarlet and White came home on top via the air route.

DRILLS ON RUNNING ATTACK

Passing, alone, will not be enough against Western Reserve and for that reason Coach Hanley has been building his club's running attack all week.

If an upset is possible Saturday, the Terrier mentor is of the opinion that the running plays will turn the trick.

Prattler Winner Of Rock Hunt Cup

LIGONIER, Pa., Oct. 12 (AP)—In a four-length triumph, Thomas T. Mott's Prattler captured the Rolling Rock Hunt Club Cup in the feature event of the opening of the club's two-day meet.

The seven-year-old campaigner, trained by a woman, Judy Johnson of New York, and with T. Roby up, swept into a commanding lead at the start and held his position for the two and a half miles over brush. The time was 5:14 2-5, the same as Ambrose Clark's Torturer, last year's winner.

Gehrig Appointed To Parole Board

NEW YORK, Oct. 12 (INS)—Lou Gehrig, famous New York Yankee first baseman who retired from active baseball last May when he learned he was suffering a form of infantile paralysis, accepted a full-time appointment by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia as member of the Municipal Parole Commission for a term of 10 years at $5700 per year.

FIVE YEARS AGO—Luigi Beccali, Olympic 1500-meter titleholder, won metric mile at Yankee Stadium, defeating Joe McClusky in slow time of 4:02.

Rock Stewards Cancel Taylor's Mounts

ROCKINGHAM PARK, Salem, N. H., Oct. 12—Apprentice Jockey W. L. Taylor's mounts for today were ordered cancelled by the stewards early this morning pending an investigation of the poor showing of R. C. Watt's Brilliant One in Wednesday's fifth race.

Brilliant One was beaten in a photographic finish by Ebony Parasol last Monday at odds of $10.80 to $1.

On the strength of that splendid performance, the son of Brilliant paraded postward at odds of $1.80 to $1 yesterday, but failed to show anything at any stage of the journey, trailing most of the trip to finish a very poor seventh in a field of nine starters.

W. L. Taylor had the mount in both races. He was immediately hauled into the stand following yesterday's flip-flop.

Owner R. C. Watts, when hauled on the carpet this morning, told the stewards that Brilliant One had come out of the race lame. The stewards immediately dispatched a track veterinary to the Watts barn. The vet corroborated Owner Watts' story.

NO 'HITLER PEACE' SAYS CHAMBERLAIN

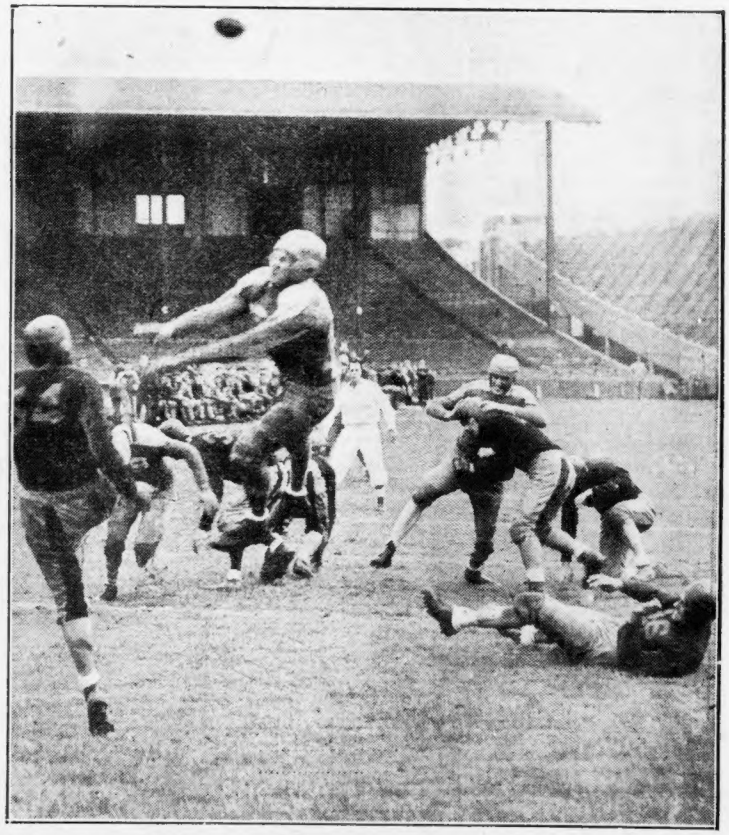
10-Mile Winner—Gene Kelley of Newton Y. M. C. A. pictured as he crosses finish line of East Boston's 10-mile grind ahead of stalwart Tarzan Brown and Leslie Pawson of R. I.



Mechanic Arts, 13-0—No packed stands greeted Mechanic Arts' 13-0 victory over Dorchester today . . . but the cameraman was on the job to snap this end-zone kick of Dorchester's Halfback John Donahue and Mechanic Arts' Left End John Yonaker's futile stab for the ball.
